Whirling Round the Sun
Clamoring for Beer
Much in a Thousand Words
The Great Treasure, Fire

—By Arthur Brisbane—

WE KNOW HOW the world around us looks. How do WE look to one of the cosmic beings, that, presumably, surround us in space?

He sees our sun, a small star, one million times smaller than some other suns, rolling in its mysterious journey toward the great star Vega, above our heads. Around our sun he sees little planets, following the sun as newly hatched chickens follow their mother, traveling in a spiral round and round the sun.

If he had a very powerful telescope, with microscopic attachment, he might see us and our little works, bridges, houses, canals, railways, banks, prisons and libraries.

Looking even more closely, to read newspaper headings about things that interest us, he would say, "Queer little creatures."

All over this country, the cosmic ear would hear men clamoring for beer, with August A. Busch of St. Louis, Colonel Pabst and the Uihlein Brothers of Milwaukee, and Jacob Ruppert of New York offering to spend twenty million dollars on new equipment, and hire thousands of men. The observant mind would ask: "Why are those little things so much excited about beer? Does it help them to think?"

Imagine his surprise when told: "No, it helps them NOT to think, and that is what they want, in a world of worry."

Concentration on beer would interest the observing mind in America, and concentration on gold in France. That well-managed country has more gold than it has ever had in its history, more than ONE HUNDRED PER CENT OF GOLD BACK OF ITS CURRENCY.

The sidereal spirit, asking the French: "Why your violent interest in gold? You can't eat it," would be told: "No, but with it we can buy things to kill our enemies."

Our cosmic visitor, compared to whom the greatest mortal would be, in the language of the English scientist, "Like a black beetle compared with God Almighty," would see a collection of human microbes gathered in Chicago, seeking somebody fit to run for President.

In far away Siam he probably would find the pleasant little King Prajadhipok and his family held prisoners by rebels on a warship, the King wondering why he went all the way to America to have cataracts taken from his eyes, if he was to behold the end of Siam's monarchy.

Rebels, probably, will not harm the royal family. Unlike the French and Russians, Siamese look on their royalty as worker ants look up to their queen.

Democrats in Chicago want to write a platform that will reveal their plan to save the country in as few words as possible. But when nobody knows just what is the matter with the country, few or many words will hardly tell what to do. Democrats call Republicanism the chief evil, but they may be wrong.

The effort to write a platform in "not more than one thousand words" ought to succeed. The first chapter of Genesis tells about the creation of the world, and everything in it, in fewer words than that.

The Democratic convention rule which makes it impossible for less than a two-thirds majority to nominate a presidential candidate, is a tricky political rule, but with respectable antecedents. Andrew Jackson used it, to force the nomination of Martin Van Buren.

But Governor Roosevelt is supposed to have a majority of delegates, and if he really has them, they can abolish the two-thirds rule and nominate him.

Frank Hague, mayor of Jersey City, a powerful personality, calls Governor Roosevelt "the only Democrat that could not win." More about that will be known in November.

The sale of votive candles is now forbidden in all churches in Rome by Cardinal Marchetti-Selvaggiani, vicar-general. He says the candles placed burning before altars of the saints by those praying for help, or giving thanks, "can easily take on the appearance of superstition." "One mass well heard, one communion well received," says the cardinal, "will obtain more heavenly grace than thousands of candles lighted every day."

The rule does not forbid lighting of candles in churches provided they are bought outside the churches.

Candle lighting dates back to days when man's most important task was to keep fire burning. There were no matches, flint or steel, and to let the fire go out was the greatest of calamaties. In many religions, maintaining the sacred fire has been considered meritorious.

Ancient Rome's vestal virgins, keeping the sacred fire burning,

Yeggs cracked a vault in the Quincy courthouse today, stole $320.46 and burned valuable records, the destruction of which will impede the prosecution of certain criminal cases.

Acts of vandalism gave the break the appearance of being a crime of revenge, possibly committed by persons who had been at one time sentenced from the court.

There were two or more burglars, police said. Apparently they worked leisurely, smoking cigarettes and drinking whiskey.

OTHER SAFE BATTERED

Cigarette butts and the cap of a whiskey bottle were found, and there was an unmistakable odor of alcohol.

The vault cracked was in the clerk's office on the first floor. The door was sledged off. Complaints ready for service, letters and court records were piled on the floor and ignited.

From a safe in the probation office the combination was knocked off, but the door withstood the attack.

ENTER THROUGH COURTROOM

Several desks were ransacked and damaged and woodwork in the offices was splintered merely out of a desire to destroy something.

The burglars entered the building, which is in Coddington st., Quincy sq., by climbing a rear fire escape and forcing a second story window in the juvenile court. The courtroom itself they damaged. They forced the door of the criminal record office in the basement.

John Otto, janitor, discovered the break at 7 a. m. Lieut. John J. Avery, who took charge of the investigation, removed a typewriter and two money boxes on which he hoped to find fingerprints.

JAIL WOMAN 71 AS KILLER

BLUEBLOOD MOTHER IS ACCUSED

Mrs. Reynolds, in N. H. Poisoning, Shown to Be Kin to Boston Aristocratic Families

The poisoning of Alexander Stewart, 70, Wilmot, N. H., farmer, was today transferred from the drab realm of "backwoods murders" to the very forefront of New England's celebrated capital cases.

In a swift unfolding of drama in a Concord, N. H., courtroom, Mrs. Cora Reynolds, 71, the little gray haired farm housekeeper accused of slaying Stewart, stood revealed as a Massachusetts aristocrat, member of a famous and wealthy family and a close relative of socially prominent Bostonians.

She stood revealed also as the great-grandmother of four children.

And the charge against her was disclosed as murder in the first degree. If convicted she will be hanged.

She pleaded not guilty and was jailed at Manchester after the chief justice of the superior court had denied a plea that she be admitted to bail pending trial in October.

HAD GUARDED SECRET

Her closely guarded secret of her kinship with Bay State aristocracy was revealed today at Concord by her son, Lyman Reynolds, 44, Boston attorney, who began the first step of what is expected to be a long-drawn-out and sensational battle to free her from the charge

The Policy of the Hearst Papers

To the Editor of the Boston Evening American:

PLEASE make your editorials in conformity with the following definite declaration of the principles and policies of the Hearst publications:

The Democratic party—to use the historic language of Samuel J. Tilden—can win if it has the courage to be Democratic.

The Hearst papers are not trying to dictate candidates.

They favor Speaker Garner on account of his sound Democratic record; and a record of PERFORMANCE means more than any number of PROFESSIONS and PROMISES.

HOWEVER, the Hearst papers will support any genuine Democrat, and will NOT support any Wall Street Democrat—if there can be any such hyphenated hybrid.

Nor will the Hearst papers support any candidate of the international bankers nominated to perpetuate the betrayal of the interests of our country and of our people which these bankers and their puppets in office have hitherto practiced.

The Hearst papers believe that the Democratic party should be democratic in deed as well as in name.

It should respect the wishes of the people, and comply with the will of the people as expressed in majority rule.

It should serve the interests of the people by nominating a candidate who will, if elected, represent the whole people and not merely the special interests.

THE Democratic party has only to prove its democracy to be overwhelmingly elected.

But if it betrays the best interests of the American people and submits to the dictation of Wall Street, it will be defeated, and will deserve to be defeated.

If we must have a Wall Street President in this country, let it be a Republican Wall Street President.

There is nothing anomalous or incongruous in that.

And let the people await the day when the Democratic party shall have "the courage to be democratic."

FIRE IMPERILS ASTHMA VICTIM

Her asthma nearly cost the life, by fire today of Mrs. Harry Brenner, 46, of 457 Webster ave., Chelsea, when she fell asleep while taking an inhalation treatment.

Mrs. Brenner, according to the report by police, was inhaling fumes from an asthma lamp in her kitchen when she dozed.

The lamp was overturned, setting fire to the kitchen table, the wall and Mrs. Brenner's negligee. Her screams attracted her husband who beat out the fire and telephoned a fire alarm.

Mrs. Brenner was treated by her family physician for burns on the right side, while firemen extinguished the $75 blaze in the kitchen.

Smith, Baker, McAdoo to Uphold Two-Thirds Rule; Walsh Opposed

Today's Democratic pre-convention developments in Chicago were:

2—Senator Walsh of Montana, Roosevelt choice for chairman against Jouett Shouse, said: "Any time is good enough to change the two-thirds rule. His statement followed a conference with the Roosevelt manager, James A. Farley.

3—Bitter warfare is going on over the proposal to abrogate the rule. Many Southern leaders have joined Al Smith and W. G. McAdoo in fighting the scheme. Newton D. Baker of Ohio also opposes it.

4—Roosevelt leaders, controlling the resolutions committee, predict it will adopt a concise, simply-worded plank for "submission of the prohibition question to the people to decide whether the Eighteenth Amendment shall be repealed, retained or modified."

5—Seating of Louisiana delegates of the Huey Long slate, voted by a group of the credentials committee, also controlled by Roosevelt, will be contested on the floor of the convention at the opening session Monday. The permanent chairmanship fight is slated for Tuesday.

Chicago, June 25 — The long-awaited coalition threat to bolt Franklin D. Roosevelt if he is nominated without the customary two-thirds majority took organized form among the Democrats today as several more party stalwarts, including Newton D. Baker of Ohio, lined up against a two-thirds rule abrogation now.

A round robin pledging the signers not to support any candidate who does not receive two-thirds of next week's convention vote was drawn up by anti-Roosevelt men as the leaders for the New York governor began another breathless check-up of the forces they will throw into the fight for abrogation.

SMITH SAYS ROOSEVELT DRIVE ALREADY BEATEN

TWO-THIRDS RULE MUST STAND DECLARE OTHER LEADERS

"LICKED," SAYS SMITH

In a statement today, Alfred E. Smith, himself a seeker of the nomination said any candidate who abrogates the two-thirds rule is "as good as licked already."

In Cleveland, Baker, most talked of as the compromise nominee for President if the Roosevelt candidacy goes on the rocks, said that a nomination produced from a majority riding rough shod over the established traditions of the party would be deeply embarrassing both to the party and the candidate.

His statement, the first he has issued about Democratic politics in weeks, was hailed by the gathering convention crowds as one more serious blow to the Roosevelt hopes.

After a conference with James A. Farley, the Roosevelt campaign manager, Senator Walsh of Montana said today "any time is a good time to abrogate the two-third rule." Walsh, the Roosevelt choice for permanent chairman, earlier had declined to reveal his attitude on the rule at this convention. He had just arrived here when first asked about it.

Belief that most of the Illinois delegation would vote for Walsh for chairman was expressed today by Vincent Dahlman, chairman of the delegation. He also said an attempt was being made to line up the delegation to abrogate the two-thirds rule.

"Carry the fight to the enemy and give no quarter."

This final word direct from Roosevelt was brought to his headquarters today by Basil O'Connor, the Governor's law partner.

O'Connor arrived with instructions to wage a finish fight for abrogation of the two-thirds rule and election of Walsh as permanent chairman.

Jouett Shouse, the man whose selection as permanent chairman is being disputed by Walsh, reiterated today his opposition to the campaign to abrogate the two-thirds rule, and said he did not see how it would be possible to do away with that rule if the unit rule for States remained in effect.

MAYOR JOHN J. SULLIVAN, left, sergeant-at-arms at Democratic conventions for last 40 years, talks things over with W. J. Egan, New Jersey delegate. (International News Photos.)

UNIT RULE STATES

Shouse, national executive chairman, gave a list of States which he said would cast their votes as a unit on all questions. They are Arizona, 6 votes; Canal Zone, 6; Georgia, 28; Iowa, 26; Kansas, 20; Kentucky, 26; Louisiana, 20; Maryland, 16; Michigan, 38; Mississippi, 20; Nevada, 6; New Mexico, 6; Oklahoma, 22; Rhode Island, 10; Texas, 46; Virginia, 24; Wyoming, 6; District of Columbia, 6; Philippines, 6; Puerto Rico, 6.

In addition Shouse said the following states had instructions or recommendations to vote the unit rule only on the presidential nomination: Colorado, 12; Connecticut, 16; Delaware, 6; Maine, 12; Minnesota, 24; Missouri, 36; Montana, 8; Tennessee, 24; Hawaii, 6.

From the opposite side of the question, Senator Cohen of Georgia, a Roosevelt supporter, expressed the opinion after a conference with James A. Farley, the Roosevelt manager, that "the anti-Roosevelt people are losing heart."

Cohen added the Roosevelt forces were gaining confidence and he expected them to win their battle with the opposition. He added the Georgia delegation would vote to abrogate the two-thirds rule as previously instructed.

FARLEY CLAIMS 650

Confidence that the Roosevelt forces would muster 650 votes to elect Walsh of Montana, permanent chairman and abrogate the two-thirds rule was expressed today by Farley.

The Roosevelt manager predicted the convention would end either Thursday night or Friday.

Alfred E. Smith, who said those seeking to abrogate the two-thirds rule in the Democratic convention were "as good as licked already," was asked about the fact that Mayor Hague of Jersey City did not list him among candidates considered stronger than Roosevelt, and replied:

"That was not necessary, was it? The State of New Jersey is behind me until Labor Day is necessary. They certainly would not be behind a dead one."

MALONE'S SUGGESTION

Asked if he would favor the suggestion by Dudley Field Malone that the Democrats adopt as their prohibition plank the plank offered by Senator Bingham and rejected by the Republican convention, Smith said:

"We will wait until we see the product of the resolutions committee."

He was told Mayor Walker favored such a move. The conversation was halted by the blare of a band parading before the hotel.

"That is your friend McAdoo leading the California delegation," some one shouted.

"Is that so?" Smith remarked. "Now, isn't that fine."

"Would you expect the nomination?" someone called from the rear.

"What nomination?" asked Smith.

"The presidential nomination."

"Just see if you can get it," laughed Smith, "You just go over there and see how easy it is to get it."

SMITH GOES GOLFING

With him he took Daniel Mooney, New York attorney; William F. Kenny, New York capitalist, and Howard Cullman, commissioner of the port of New York authority.

"I am taking out one of my own class, but I won't tell you which, one of the three it is," Al said.

"How many strokes do you give?" he was asked.

"I get; I never give," the "Happy Warrior" said with a chuckle.

Foes of Roosevelt predict that before the opening gavel falls in the convention next Monday other leaders from the South in addition to Senator Harrison of Mississippi and Glass of Virginia, publicly will denounce the proposal to abrogate the two-thirds rule.

The party's presidential nominee of 1920, former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, was aligned today with the forces opposed to changing the rule.

The proposal was described in Dayton, O., by Cox in a public statement as "an unfortunate error."

TAMMANY POWWOW

Among arrivals today was Joseph P. Tumulty, who was President Wilson's secretary.

Tumulty said he favored retaining the two-thirds rule and would give his reasons in a formal statement later.

John F. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall; Mayor Walker of New York and James Farley, Roosevelt campaign manager, spent 15 minutes together behind closed doors of a secret Tammany conference room today.

Later they said they had discussed nothing but the distribution of New York's allotment of convention tickets.

Sheppard, Though Dry, Backs Garner

Washington, June 24—Morris Sheppard of Texas, who championed the prohibition amendment through the Senate, next week will remain here while his Democratic colleagues in Chicago seek to tear apart the structure he helped build.

"My senatorial duties will keep me here," he said. "The dry side will have able defenders at Chicago. Personally, I favor the course taken by the Democratic party in 1928—that is, a declaration for vigorous enforcement of all laws, with no mention of prohibition. That makes it a nonpartisan issue."

Despite his firm belief in prohibition Sheppard is all for his fellow Texan, Speaker John N. Garner, to win the presidential nomination. He considers Garner's ability and his attitude on other important questions far outweigh the speaker's recent declaration for repeal.

Unpaid Teachers in Plea to Al Smith

Chicago, June 25 (AP)—Chicago's unpaid school teachers have turned to Alfred E. Smith, "the Happy Warrior" of 1928, for financial relief.

They have asked him in a letter to use his influence with the leaders of the Democratic national convention to bring about of a plank pledging adequate federal aid for public education.

The letter addressed Smith as "Dear Happy Warrior of 1928," and was signed by David F. Davis of the Chicago High School Teachers' Association.

A vestal found guilty of unchastity was shut up in an underground cell, covered with earth and smothered. Each vestal, beginning her term of service, had her hair cut off, the locks hung on a certain tree.

For hundreds of generations fire was the most sacred possession of the human race, and, therefore, supposed to be a most acceptable religious offering.

Gibbons Says Rivals Need 'Jitter Juice'

By Floyd Gibbons

Copyright, 1932, International News Service

Chicago, June 25 (INS)—Hello everybody:

Page Balto, the Alaskan husky dog, and his sledge loaded with serum. Only make it nerve tonic this time.

Floyd Gibbons

They were all smiling and confident yesterday. Peacefully calling each other names. Optimism had reached a new high.

And then, in flew Amelia. Chicago forgot its guests parked in the spare bedrooms, and bolted to Lady Lindy.

And by the time the candidates were up and shaved, the news had gotten around that Amelia had been nominated for President by acclamation.

Well, a good stiff bromo seltzer eased off that shock. But, by noon a newsboy on Michigan ave. upset everything again. He was yelling about Jimmy Walker's invasion. Rumor was that he had gone direct to the stadium, called a convention of his admirers and had accepted the presidency without waiting for an election.

ALFALFA GETS SHAVE

Of course, that was exaggerated, but those receptions handed to Amelia and then to Jimmy sort of started an inferiority complex working among the candidates.

Besides, the presidential aspirants suddenly realized they'd have to keep their pants pressed and maybe carry canes to head off any further demonstrations for Jimmy.

One barber told me Alfalfa Bill Murray came busting into the shop and got his first shave this week.

On top of all that, Governor Albert Ritchie got in town just in time to horn in on the noise and cheering for Amelia and Jimmy, plus what he rated on his own. And that's not so good for candidatorial nerves.

NEED JITTER JUICE

Then the army, which is holding its Washington bicentennial celebration, sent up a blimp that looks exactly like the ghost of a big, silver elephant hovering over this battlefield like a warning from 1928.

So hitch up the husky-dogs, boys and girls. Rush that relief shipment of jitter juice—prepaid.

Mrs. Gallagher Is Named Aid at Convention

On the eve of her departure for the Democratic convention in Chicago, Mrs. Mary E. Gallagher of Arborway, Forest Hills, prominent Massachusetts Democratic worker, was notified today that she has been appointed assistant secretary of the convention.

She is a former president of the Massachusetts Women's Democratic Club, is president of the Suffolk County Women's Club, and was secretary of the Roosevelt-for-President campaign conducted in Boston and throughout the State by Mayor Curley.

Mrs. Gallagher left for Chicago this afternoon.

Miss Margaret S. Humphrey, Boston teacher and daughter of Capt. James Humphrey of Ladder 13, today was wed to James J. Cronin, Jr., Medford accountant, in St. William's Church, Dorchester.

Dr. Angell, Yale's Head, to Wed Widow

Philadelphia, June 25 (AP)—The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin today says the engagement of Dr. James Rowland Angell, president of Yale University, and Mrs. Katharine Cramer Woodman, of Ardmore, Pa., is to be formally announced shortly.

Mrs. Woodman is the former Katherine S. Cramer of Charlotte, N. C., and the widow of Paul Woodman. She has six children.

Randolph Hit-Run Driver Sentenced

Guy De Angelis of Maitland rd., Randolph, was sentenced today in Quincy Court to two months in the House of Correction as a hit and run driver.

He is alleged to have been the driver of a car which sped away on June 6 in Charles st., Houghs Neck, after striking Allison Deane, 10, of 71 Parkhurst st., Houghs Neck.

100000 ATTEND AS CHILDREN'S MASS IS SUNG

Dublin Is Turned Into City of Youth as Cardinal Presides in Impressive Ceremony

Dublin, June 25 (AP)—A cascade of starch and bright eyes—white dresses and white ribbons and white sashes—fitted into the majestic pageant of the Eucharistic Congress today.

It was children's day.

From all over Ireland—and some from faraway lands—they came, a stream of children, until 100,000 stood in orderly groups before the high altar in Phoenix Park, on ground that for their forbears was the private estate of their British rulers.

CITY OF CHILDREN

By 10 a. m.—an hour before the solemn pontifical high mass began—Dublin seemed a city of children and the avenue leading to the park was almost a solid stream of motor cars filled with the bobbing heads of children.

In the park, Cardinal Lauri, the Pope's representative, celebrated the Pontifical mass. Before that the children sang in Gaelic the hymn "Soul of My Saviour," led by a choir of 500 children.

Tomorrow the congress will end with a Pontifical high mass which 1,000,000 persons are expected to attend. After the mass the congregation will march in procession and a blessing will be given.

WOMEN PRAISED

Last night 100,000 women from Ireland and from many parts of the world who assembled before the Eucharistic congress altar heard themselves praised for their religious sacrifices.

The Most Rev. Andrew Joseph McDonald, archbishop of St. Andrews and Edinburgh, told them that the "destiny of the human race lies largely in the hands of women."

Citing the Pope's recent encyclical concerning the spread of the forces of anti-religion, the archbishop assured the women that "evils are not cast out except by prayer and penance."

"In the present crisis," he added, "none can render to God the homage He deserves as can the maidens and mothers of the Catholic church."

REGIS COLLEGE GRAD IS BRIDE

Just 15 days after her graduation from Regis College, Weston, Miss Ruth Hodges of Benton rd., Somerville, became the bride today of Edmund J. McGreenery, former Cambridge school committeeman, Boston College and Harvard Business School graduate.

The ceremony was performed by Bishop John B. Peterson, recently appointed bishop of the Manchester, N. H., diocese, who also celebrated the nuptial mass in the Church of St. Catherine of Genoa, Somerville.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. May Dean Hodges. McGreenery is a son of Mrs. John J. McGreenery of 161 Brattle st., Cambridge.

The couple were attended by Miss Mary Louise Rogers of Newton, maid of honor; Harold F. McGreenery, brother of the bridegroom; Miss Yolande Arcand of Allston and Miss Margaret Sheridan of Cambridge, bridesmaids. Ushers were Paul A. McGreenery of Arlington, Joseph M. Carew of Hingham, Charles B. Hickey of Cambridge and T. Joseph Cody of Arlington.

Becomes Bride

Miss Ruth Hodges of Benton rd., Somerville, who was today married to Edmund J. McGreenery of Cambridge, 15 days after her graduation from Regis College. Mr. McGreenery is a Boston College and Harvard Business School graduate.

V. F. W. TO CALL ON CONGRESS TO PAY BONUS

Blake Comes to Support of Veterans' Administration at Plymouth Convention

Plymouth, June 25—Congress and the veterans' administration in Washington were in for a drubbing as decks were cleared today for debate on resolutions at the 12th annual state convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A resolution demanding that Congress reconsider its action on the bonus is certain of adoption, but that seeking removal of Gen. Frank T. Hines as director of Veterans' Administration faces stiff opposition and possible defeat.

Col. William J. Blake, regional manager of the Veteran Bureau in Boston, which is free of criticism, made a spirited speech in defense of the Veterans' Administration in Washington on the floor of the convention in Memorial Hall.

"It is the duty of every veteran who has the interest of his country at heart to deny misrepresentations, innuendoes and ugly rumors about veterans' administration," said Col. Blake. "There have been altogether too many of these slanderous reports.

BUREAU DEFENDED

"Many men do not know the laws under which the Veterans' Bureau is operated. Many seem to think, because of their unfamiliarity with the laws, that there must be some racket connected with it. No law regarding veterans has been placed on the statute books until it has been thoroughly discussed by Congress and approved by the President.

"So please do your bit in correcting the erroneous impression and stamping out the insinuation that men are getting money from the Veterans' Bureau who have not been injured. Tell your comrades that the Veterans' Administration is a grave responsibility and not a racket. Let's close up the ranks and bring home to our country what the tradition of the government has been for years."

APPEAL FOR BONUS ARMY

John H. Fahey of Watertown, who was a member of the "Bonus Expeditionary Force" in Washington, was expected to make an appeal to the delegates today to aid the bonus boosters at the Capital. He has a card showing that he is acting for Walter W. Waters, commander of the encamped veterans.

The town was thronged and gay with decorations today in anticipation of this afternoon's military parade. There will be 10,000 marchers and 100 bands in line. Election of officers Sunday, the closing day, will be marked by bitter contests. The women of the auxiliary will elect Mrs. Irene Forrest of Springfield president to succeed Miss Mary Grennan of Brookline. Mrs. Forrest is unopposed, but there are nine candidates for conductress.

Dog Officer Gets Care of Two Skunks

Two baby skunks, which some day won't be babies any longer, were in the reluctant possession today of Motorcycle Officer James A. D. MacKay of Quincy police, who also is a dog officer.

Being dog officer doesn't impel him to accept skunks, but when his friend, William Douglas of Quincy, appeared at MacKay's home late last night with the two furry babies—what could MacKay do but accept custody of them and place them in a separate compartment in the dog pound.

Douglas said he was driving back from Nantasket last night when a mama skunk trailed across the road, followed by nine little ones. Only seven continued across the road into the brush, the other two stopping in the glare of Douglas' headlights. He captured them.

CALIFORNIA 44 IN BIG PARADE

Chicago, June 25 (AP)—California came to town today bringing 44 votes for "Jack" Garner.

After the delegation's special train arrived the delegates, alternates and a number of other Californians, who came as rooters, fell in behind a band and marched to their hotel.

The procession was headed by an immense California flag, bearing a likeness of a belligerent bear. Signs carried by the delegates presented a platform in a series of slogans:

"Garner is for jobs, not charity."

"Labor is for Garner."

"Garner is for repeal."

Dry Law of Minor Import

Wanamaker Charges Cruelty in Divorce

Reno, Nev., June 25—Suit for divorce, charging cruelty, has been filed here by John Wanamaker, Jr., grandson of the founder of the New York and Philadelphia department stores, against Pauline Disston Wanamaker.

John Wanamaker, Jr.

Wanamaker seeks to have the court approve a settlement of $4375 quarterly for support of his wife and $1200 quarterly for each of their two children.

Carmona Persuades Aids to Remain in Office

Lisbon, Portugal, June 25—President Oscar Carmona has prevailed upon Portuguese government ministers to remain in office until their places have been filled, it was announced today.

Pres. Carmona

The government presented its resignation at a cabinet meeting last night and was accepted by President Carmona on condition they remain in office until substitutions were made.

The Portuguese government has been headed by Gen. Domingo de Olivier as premier since January, 1930.

Culbertson and Wife Seek Foreign Conquests

Mrs. Culbertson

The king and queen of contract bridge plan to conduct a series of special matches in the various foreign capitals they will visit during their stay abroad.

They also plan to organize a London bridge club.

LABOR RELIEF PLANK URGED

Chicago, June 25 (AP)—Democratic platform makers today gave organized labor an attentive and inquisitive hearing.

Mayor Walker of New York, asked:

"If the federal government gave aid to municipalities for public construction would that be just as satisfactory as a federal building program?"

"Yes," replied Green.

William G. McAdoo asked if labor had taken any position on payment in full on veterans' bonus.

Green said labor took the position the issue was up to the American Legion.

The Problem

TO reverse the spiral of declining tendencies steps must be taken without delay to redeem the country's unemployed from idleness.

The Remedy

A $5,000,000,000 bond issue by the United States to build great public works, employ several million men and start the nation back to prosperity.

She was held without bail today charged with murder.

MOTHER LOSES FIGHT FOR GIRL

Her fight of years to recover her child was lost today by Mrs. Catherine L. Hurley, a stenographer, of Bowman st., Neponset, in a decision by Judge Pierce in Supreme Court.

Under the decree the child, now 14, and known as Adelaide St. Martin, remains the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William St. Martin of Taunton.

The decision upholds an adverse report against Mrs. Hurley by Att'y. Wendell P. Murray, as master, recommending dismissal of her petition to appeal from a decree of adoption by Judge Mayhew R. Hitch in Bristol Probate Court Oct. 24, 1925.

Adelaide, according to the court records, was born at St. Mary's Infant Asylum, Dorchester, Dec. 16, 1918, and Jan. 11, 1921, was adopted by Frank Napoleon Rancourt and his wife Flora in Maine.

Following Mrs. Rancourt's death, the girl was given by Rancourt into the care of the St. Martins, who later adopted her in Bristol probate court.

A short time afterward in October, 1925, an agent of the infant asylum took the baby from the St. Martins and placed it in St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, but the St. Martins went into Supreme Court and obtained a writ of habeas corpus.

ELY'S SON WEDS PENNSY GIRL

East Brady, June 25—Richard Ely, Boston law student and son of Governor Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, was married here today to Miss Louise Ludwick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Ludwick.

The ceremony was performed in the Ludwick home in the presence of a few close friends of both families by Rev. H. T. S. Chisholm of the East Brady Presbyterian Church. Governor and Mrs. Ely arrived here yesterday.

William E. Parks of Norton, Mass., was best man and the maid of honor was Miss Marion Ludwick, a sister of the bride.

The newlyweds will go to New York and on Tuesday will sail for Bermuda. They will make their home in Oxford ct., Cambridge.

WATERS, BONUS CHIEF, QUITS

Washington, June 25 (AP)—Walter W. Waters of Portland, Ore., resigned for the second time today as commander-in-chief of the Bonus Expeditionary Forces.

The reason he gave was that he did not think the "rank and file of the men" had had a sufficient voice in naming the commander-in-chief.

Beginning early in the week, when the bonus marchers' ranks began to dwindle from desertions, Waters had an increasingly difficult time keeping the men in line.

Another cause of a disagreement was his action in severing relations with veterans who were members of the Workers Ex-Service Men's League, a Communist organization.

Patrolman Retires

Mayor Curley today approved the retirement papers of Patrolman Edwin L. Montgomery of the Back Bay station, who has reached the age of 65 and who has been a member of the department for 33 years.

Court Speeds Up Hutton's Love Girl Trial

JOBLESS FUND PLAN CALLED BIG FRAUD

$6000 Raised in Peabody by Beautics; Police Trace the Backers of Gigantic Plot

An unemployment relief "racket," already well on its way toward extracting thousands of dollars from the people of New England, was exposed today, following the disclosures of a "cleanup" made by the gang in Peabody.

College girls from a number of institutions in this section have been hired as solicitors for the outfit.

These girls are acting in good faith, in the opinion of the investigating authorities, who believe that the students think they are really aiding the unemployed.

In Peabody more than $6000 was taken from residents and business firms—an amount which would have provided for a large proportion of that city's needy.

Three college girls did the soliciting in Peabody and they had been gone for more than 24 hours before it was discovered by the donators that the whole thing was a "fake."

They were attractive girls, all with charming personalities, and made a good impression on the contributors who believe, with Police Chief Edward F. Pierce, that the students themselves have been "buncoed.

Chief Pierce said today that he has uncovered information indicating that the racket is a well-ordered one which probably has already taken large sums from other communities without attracting suspicion.

Some of those approached by these three girls believed they were North Shore debutantes.

URGE TAR AND FEATHERS

Donations in Peabody ranged from 50 cents to $100. Apparently that city was one of those selected for working the swindle because of announcement a short time ago of a reorganization of relief measures there.

The girls worked in Peabody for more than a week.

"The several thousand dollars taken from Peabody residents in this fraud would have given heads of destitute families work for weeks," said Mayor J. Leo Sullivan. "It is the worst kind of a crime."

Efforts are being made to learn what methods were used to hire the girls and in this way to run down the gang who are believed to be operating now in some other Massachusetts community.

Senora Calles Is Continuing Gain

Senora Leonor Calles, 26-year-old wife of Mexico's former President, was reported "continuing well" to day after an operation for removal of a tumor on the brain at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. SHE SAYS HE LOVED HER, BUT WED AIMEE

Myrtle Hazel Joan St. Pierre, the nurse who is suing David Hutton, husband of Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, for $200,000 heart balm, admitted on the witness stand that she gave Hutton alcohol rubs and declared he smothered her with kisses.

David Hutton, singer for Aimee, the evangelist, and then her husband, whose lawyers forced Miss St. Pierre to admit affairs with other men and drinking parties in which guests "became so drunk she threw them out." David is shown in court.

Capital Terrified as Veto Hangs Over Aid

By Elsie Robinson
Author of "Listen World."

Washington, June 25 (INS)—Washington is afraid? Of what? Washington does not know. But a stranger from the Hinterland can tell at a glance.

Washington is afraid of reality. Washington is afraid of three words that have suddenly become terribly alive, fearsomely close . . . POVERTY . . . IDLENESS . . . HUNGER. For three years Washington has been hearing these words. But one hears so many words in this town. Surely these were only a nervous sound.

Meanwhile, to the west, to the north, to the south, depression tightened its grim, gray ring. Factories shut down. Banks closed their doors. Shops closed. Farms were abandoned. Millions upon millions of men lost their jobs. Charity funds failed. Towns and cities were bankrupt. To the west, to the north, to the South, America became ragged and gaunt, desolate and desperate.

SAME OLD PAYROLL

BUT WASHINGTON DIDN'T BELIEVE IT. FOR WASHINGTON IS ON GOVERNMENT PAYROLL, AND GOVERNMENT PAYROLL HASN'T ALTERED IN THE LAST THREE YEARS.

Poverty, idleness, hunger—these were only boogie words to Washington. The beautiful white mansions fronting the splendid avenues . . . the gay little shops crammed with flouncy finery . . . the sparkling restaurants fragrant with Southern cookery—didn't believe those words.

The ambassadors, the diplomats, the Cabinet members, the Senators and Representatives, dancing with their ladies under the great, crystal chandeliers—banqueting in the tapestried halls—moving pompously down the marble corridors—didn't believe them, either.

poverty, idleness, hunger—silly talk for ignorant people, that was what it was. Times, perhaps, might be a little hard—particularly for the shiftless who deserve them anyway. But look around. Weren't folks going to the movies? Weren't folks shopping in the stores? Then why all this fuss 'n' fret? People could get jobs if they wanted them. Depression? Poof? Merely hysteria, my dear, nothing more.

And that man sitting in the White House—what of him? Did he believe they were only boogie words? Did he honestly think all was well with America? Was he not disturbed by the report that the little children he loves were "competing with the rats in the gutters for food?" One can only, in pity, conclude that he, too, doesn't believe. Else he would never have so dallied — surveyed — conferred — postponed—platitudinized.

And so for three years Washington danced and yawned, laughter and made florid, futile speeches while America agonized in the grip of poverty, idleness and hunger.

BUT NOW AT LAST WASHINGTON HAS TO FACE REALITY. FOR THOSE THREE TERRIBLE WORDS ARE NO LONGER "JUST A SOUND." THEY HAVE COME TO TOWN. THEY HAVE COME IN THE SCARRED BODIES, IN THE GAUNT EYES, IN THE FILTHY RAGS OF 25,000 FIGHTING MEN.

Poverty, idleness and hunger have moved in on Washington. They are camped by the river. They are prowling past the food markets. They are standing outside the beautiful homes—looking in. They are mounting the Capitol steps—walking in.

TODAY THE SENATE ELEVATORS WERE STOPPED.

HOOVER GUARDED

They were stopped because Congress was afraid. Three hundred veterans entered the Capitol. They carried no guns, made no threats, committed no overt acts. But suddenly Congress remembered that it had once trained these men to kill—rewarded them for killing—and then left them to starve.

AND CONGRESS WAS AFRAID.

There is something wrong in the White House, too. Almost never does the President leave the grounds. Once, recently, he was driven hurriedly to Congressional Hall to bestow a medal on Amelia Earhart. It was to be a great event—thousands of tickets had been sent out. The crowds were gathering. But as soon as he entered, President Hoover ordered every door locked—leaving half the audience still outside.

TERROR. Everywhere in Washington. At last Washington is being forced to remember America . . . being made to realize that there is something in life beside political shinannigans and social climbing.

WILL HE VETO AID?

Still the government refuses to recognize or aid the foodless, homeless men who saved it in 1917. Still the Republican party ignores them in its platform. Still the President declares that Federal aid is a "dole" . . . AND WARNS THAT HE MAY VETO THE WAGNER RELIEF BILL, INADEQUATE AS IT IS

Will he? The next few days will tell. And if he does—WHAT OF THOSE 25,000 DESPERATE MEN CAMPED ON WASHINGTON'S WASTES?

What of the 50,000,000 other hungry, frantic souls, out there beyond the horizon — their hollow eyes fixed on Washington? WASHINGTON WONDERS. WASHINGTON SHUDDERS. WASHINGTON IS AFRAID.

PILLBOX PROBE CONTINUES

Preliminary to dismantling the huge still found in the "pill-box" in Woburn, prohibition agents were checking today on bills of lading on shipments from the Massachusetts Refineries within the last few months.

These shipments of "materials" from the plant where the "pill-box" is located to consignees in Connecticut, New York and New Jersey will be checked at delivery points in an endeavor to learn if some of the "material" was alcohol.

Meanwhile, preparations were under way today to dismantle the huge still found in the strangely constructed building which defied entrance of the dry agents for several days.

During the dismantling, it was said at prohibition headquarters today, a representative of the closed Medford Trust Co. and Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy will be present to see that property of the plant, under a $30,000 mortgage held by the bank, is not damaged.

SHE TELLS OF RUBS GIVEN TO AIMEE'S MAN

At One of Nurse's Parties the Guests Drank So Much She Threw Them Out

Los Angeles, June 25 (AP)—The tearful description of the love scenes in the alleged broken romance of David Hutton, singer, and Myrtle Joan St. Pierre, nurse, is taking too much time, Judge Roth believes.

"This trial is costing the county a lot of money and it ought to be expedited," said the judge, after the pretty, brunette nurse completed her third day of cross-examination in her $200,000 suit for alleged breach of promise against the husband of Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, evangelist.

Before the court adjourned yesterday for the week-end, Judge Roth took a hand in an effort to speed things up by admonishing Miss St. Pierre for talking out of turn.

THREE TIPSY GUESTS OUT

A fainting spell, sobbing and heated denials punctuated her story. In tears, she admitted association with other men, after prolonged cross-examination by Hutton's attorney.

Asked if Lloyd Curry, a young Pasadena station agent whose name was conspicuous in the questioning had remained at her home until dawn one morning, the nurse replied:

"I do not know that."

She told of a gin party, at which she insisted she did not drink while her guests "mixed cocktails until I had to throw them out." The party was given in her home in 1930. The guests were another young woman and two men she said she had met by chance.

GAVE HIM RUBS

Her last meeting with Hutton before his marriage was sobbingly described. He came, she said, only to retrieve a copy of "The Strange Death of President Harding" which he had lent her, and didn't even kiss her hand.

Much questioning also was devoted to "My Love for You," a song which Miss St. Pierre said the baritone sang for her and later crooned over the radio to the evangelist. But the questioning, despite conferences between Hutton and his counsel, apparently led nowhere.

Questioned about treatments she claimed she gave Hutton in her health salon in Pasadena, she told of giving him alcohol rubs.

Diverting the examination to her illness over Hutton's waning love, Atty. Jones asked her:

Q.—Well, did you attend any parties at your sister's home during the time you were grieving after Hutton's marriage? A.—Yes, I at-

RADIO STAR'S WIFE TUNES OUT LOVE

Mrs. Graham McNamee, wife of radio star, who has won her final divorce decree. The divorce followed a raid on Graham's penthouse, in which a young woman figured. She was awarded $1000 month alimony.

MRS. M'NAMEE WINS FREEDOM

New York, June 25—Mrs. Graham McNamee, former wife of the radio announcer, has won her final divorce decree, it became known today.

In February last Mrs. McNamee testified before Referee Platzek that she and two witnesses had gone to the announcer's penthouse apartment at 225 W. 106th st., Nov. 24, 1931. McNamee had failed to broadcast the event, his wife said, but she looked through a window and saw McNamee in pajamas and an unnamed young woman in a night gown.

Mrs. McNamee said she had an out-of-court agreement with her husband to receive alimony of $1000 a month. The interlocutory decree was granted Feb. 28 by Supreme Court Justice Cohn and certification of the decree was signed June 3.

JAILED CAB GIRL GETS HEARING

Palmer, June 25—Miss Cleo Camuse, 23, cigar-smoking taxi-cab girl, sentenced to 60 days for driving an uninsured taxicab from Boston, received aid today from her sister, Mary, and a New York lawyer.

As a result of their conference with Judge Burdick, the latter agreed to reopen the case next Friday.

Miss Mary Camuse, who is secretary for the lawyer, Robert Blair, told the judge her sister had suffered a nervous breakdown last year and had a relapse when her father died this month. Her mother is en route from Norman, Okla.

"She insisted on leaving New York and going to Boston to try to get a scholarship in an architectural school," said the sister. "I accompanied her, but had to return to my work, leaving her with $30."

Cleo bought an old cab for $25, borrowed a number plate from another machine and started home. She was wearing knickers and puffing a cigar when arrested here. She appealed the sentence of 60 days, but is at the county jail at Springfield in lieu of $1000 bail.

"Cinderella Girl" to Tour Europe

Editha Pierce Davis, the Lynnfield "Cinderella" girl, who inherited $1,000,000 from her foster mother, Mrs. Adelaide Pierce Davis, revealed today that she will travel in Europe this summer, before taking up her chosen career as a nurse.

She has just graduated from the fashionable Kendall Hall School in Beverly. Her trip abroad will be made with an uncle living in Boston.

Clark, Disabled Vet, to Washington Alone

Frank W. Clark, disabled veteran, of 16 Trinity ave., Lynn, announced today he would go to Washington alone Monday, instead of leading a group of veterans as planned.

Clark said leaders of the B. E. F. at Washington had asked him to go alone for conferences, after which he will go to Connecticut and New York and lead veterans from those sections. He said he had resigned from all veterans' organizations. He claims to have proposed a march on Washington as long ago as the Legion convention in Boston in 1930.

Books—And a Number of Things

—By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE—

Most people flee from New York at the first touch of summer. Yet those who find it necessary to remain in town do not complain half as much as one would suppose they might. For there is a certain charm and languor about the metropolis in June, July and August. It takes on something of the aspect it used to wear in more quiet times. It is uncrowded. There is moving space. Now, at last, the town is ours again!

We see its little lovelinesses. It is as if we peeped into and even miraculously experienced our own childhood once more. In the hurry and bustle and scamper of our ordinary days something of New York was lost to us; and something of that really old and leisurely New York will, of course, be forever lost to us. Yet in the heart of summer a hint, a perfume of that past, is wafted back to us, just as a memory of June returns with Indian summer.

After a glaring day on the streets, how cool and pleasant an apartment seems which has been closed against the heat, the furniture of which is covered with clean linen slips!

And how luxurious is the bath one takes in one's temperate tub, and then how good is the dropping in of the stray comrade, equally alone in town, and the sipping of the icy drinks one is certain to prepare!

Afterward there may be a calm and quiet dinner on some green terrace—New York clubs offer hospitable areas to tired men-about-town, where the breeze is kind and the view is delightful.

Or one may go to any of the great roof garden restaurants, and bow to one's cronies, or run into something lovely in chiffon who has spent the day in the city doing some necessary shopping.

An old intimacy comes back; and what could be more fun than to take one of those old-fashioned fiacres—plenty may be found in front of the Plaza Hotel—and roll through the green park, finding unsuspected nooks and byways and turnings which one had long since forgotten, because, in the hurry of motoring, these are unnoticed by us.

We are sure not to have remembered, for instance, that Central Park is full of little hillocks; grades which the skimming motor takes with ease, but which one's old horse takes panting, and at a walk.

All around us is greenness, and beyond the towering buildings, which remind us that the stern city is still there like a ghost. On the western border of the park they have recently erected a huge apartment which, in certain misty lights, looks exactly like a phantom castle in Spain, rising over the trees.

Its airy bulk might be something tenuous in a mirage — delicate, dreamlike, instead of something of steel and stone.

The unimaginative rich have barred their windows and doors with wooden shutters and, if we stroll up the avenue on one of these summer evenings, the blind eyes stare at us. We see private watchmen passing up and down before these mansions, and we wonder if life is worth this constant struggle of the rich to keep their possessions intact.

We think of the marble halls and corridors within, deserted and useless now. We think of the old masters, covered with netting; of the books locked away, the silver in the steel vaults, the rugs folded and protected against moths! and somewhere, by a blowing sea, or in some mountain camp, the owners of this palace have created another palace, which is also being watched and guarded.

Is it worth the struggle? How much pleasanter our own simple dinner has been with a friend, and later, our quiet book read under a soft lamp back in our own tiny rooms!

We, at least, do not have to guard our treasures—because we have none; and we bless whatever gods there be for the fate that has made us relatively poor. Yet, when the long week-end approaches we are not sorry to get out of the city.

New York is blest with summer resorts easy of access. All Long Island is at its door—the north and south shores alive, with motors hurrying to the sound of the ocean. And New Jersey is just across the river, and Connecticut with its hills and valleys and Westchester County with its rich velvet softness. No town is better supplied with pleasant places of escape.

But during the week, when brokers and all busy professional men must remain within its iron grasp, there is plenty to do, plenty to see, plenty to occupy one's long evenings.

The revues flourish. Electric fans blow over linen-covered rows of orchestra chairs; and the signs on the sidewalk, indicating that it is 30 degrees cooler inside, are not false. Beautiful girls disport themselves for our delight, thinly clad.

Gentle music is wafted to our ears. Comedians make us laugh and forget the cares of the day.

Urchins, during the intermission, do the Charleston on the hot pavements, and we gladly toss our pennies to them as they scamper up the street at the approach of an unkind policeman.

If we crave outdoor music there are the free civic concerts in Central Park; or, up in the Bronx, grand opera for almost nothing in Starlight Park; or, better still, the orchestral concerts in the Lewisohn Stadium, with the moon and stars over our heads and the college buildings forming a beautiful back drop. Gone, of course, are the days when around table we could sip our stein of beer or those horseshoe seats on the ground.

Guttersnipes and weary mothers with children in arms or tagging at their heels peer through the iron fence. Students lounge in the twenty-five-cent seats—the best of all, by the way; and no audience, anywhere, is more attentive than at the Stadium.

The Fifth ave. buses take one thither; and from every crevice and corner of the big town people move toward this pivot to enjoy the best programs conducted by the best conductors.

There are worse places than New York on a hot summer night.

Late Afternoon Ceremony in Church

The marriage of Miss Dorothea Ware, daughter of Mrs. Charlotte Lindsay Ware of 57 Brattle st., Cambridge, to John Frank Langmaid, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Frank Langmaid of Swampscott, was solemnized at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the altar of the First Church of Cambridge (Unitarian) by the Rev. Ralph E. Bailey, rector.

The bride appeared in a charming gown of ivory satin, with a cowl neckline and court train, a cap of old lace with veil to match and carried a boquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley. She was preceded by eight attendants.

The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Miss Mary Lee Ware, a debuante of 1930, who wore a beautiful gown of Elizabethan style in peach crepe, brown hat, and carried a boquet of Johenna Hill roses and lavender sweet peas. Charles F. Ware, grandfather of the bride, gave her away.

In Bridal Group

Miss Marian Lee Ware, a young cousin of Miss Ware's acted as flower girl at today's ceremony, and she and the six bridesmaids were gowned in green crepe of the same period, with brown horsehair hats and bouquets of talisman roses.

Mrs. Ware, the bride's mother, wore a charming gown of pale blue, trimmed with a collar of old lac*

The bridesmaids attending included Mrs. Robert Murray Whittemore (Alice Creamer Ives) of Cambridge, Mrs. Walcott Thomas (Helen Gilman Nichols) of Cambridge, Miss Alice Ware, another cousin of the bride; Miss Gertrude Langmaid, a sister of the bridegroom; Miss Anna Davis and Miss Rebecca Norcross of Cambridge.

Mr. Benjamin Langmaid accompanied his brother as best man, and six ushers assisted the guests at the church. They included Mr. Joseph Langmaid, a brother of the bridegroom; Mr. J. Lindsay Ware, the bride's brother; Mr. Richard Edwards and Mr. Nelson Kimball of Swampscott, Mr. Foster Davis of Boston and Mr. Richard Lombard of Arlington.

Among Guests

Among the many relatives and friends attending the wedding of this popular bride may be mentioned Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Ware, who came from Fitchburg for this ceremony, also Mr. and Mrs. Peter P. Blanchard from Baltimore, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Lawrence Pierson, Essex Fells, New Jersey.

They were guests at a reception, following the wedding at the home of bride's mother, which was given before the newly wedded couple departed on their honeymoon to an unannounced destination. On their return they will be setting up their home at Westbrook, Me., just outside Portland.

Dance Recital on Program

Mrs. Guy Currier's beautiful Outdor theater, Mariarden, will open the regular summer season with two appearances of Mr. Ted Shawn and his dancers, on Friday and Saturday nights, July 15 and 16.

Miriam Winslow, the well known daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Winslow, Jr., will be with Mr. Shawn, and is prominently cast in the company, with Regimia Beck, and Anna Austin heading the dancers.

May Fiske Hoffman is again this summer acting as director of the Mariarden Outdoor theater. Several feature musical productions are contemplated during the season all of which will have the patronage of the summer residents now arriving at Peterborough, N. H.

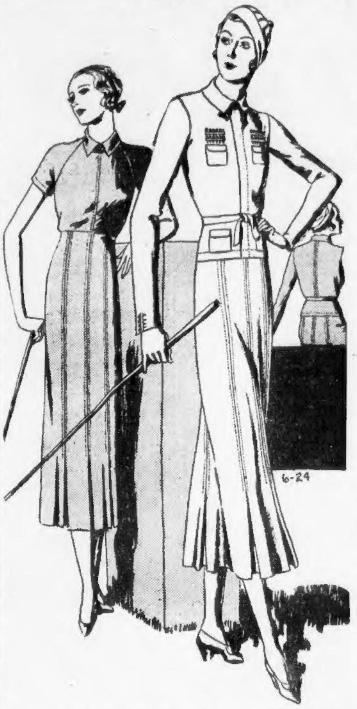
Frocks Follow Military Lines

SKETCHED IN PARIS



One of the most amusing suits of the season, done by Mme. Lyolene, is a gold costume using the colors of the French armies and the decorations somewhat like those on pre-war Cossack uniforms. The jacket and skirt—both cut on rather classic sports lines and provided with correct fullness to allow for plenty of activity—are of a crepey wool jersey in the pale blue of the French army. The Cossack effects, just above the pockets on the jacket, are not only for decoration, but serve a practical purpose; each little line (and there are four) holds nine or so little wood golf tees, painted bright red.

MAYOR PRAISED FOR ARTICLE

A special news article, written by Mayor Curley for the Boston Evening American, in which he told of conditions as they exist in the city welfare department, and of his efforts to save municipal workers from wage cuts by instituting a voluntary system of monthly contributions to that department, so impressed the teachers of the Andrew Jackson School, Allston, that they wrote the mayor today, expressing gratitude for his efforts.

"Such a lucid article should help clarify misunderstandings in the public mind regarding Boston's municipal employes and members of the school system," Miss Helen Pauline Kelly, representing the teachers, wrote.

"The gravity of this financial situation — world-wide, national and municipal—calls for co-operation, and we are glad to assist when motives are both sound and worthy."

BAKER WARNS OF ATTACK ON 2-3DS RULE

Cleveland, June 25 (AP)—Newton D. Baker broke his long silence on political matters today with a slashing statement against the plans of the Roosevelt supporters to nominate the New York Governor for President by breaking the two-thirds rule of the Democratic party.

"A nomination procured from a majority riding rough shod over the established traditions of the party would be deeply embarrassing both to the party and the candidate who started out with a moral flaw in his title."

Heretofore, Baker, one of the leading "dark horse" possibilities for the nomination, has declined to discuss either the strife over the Democratic nominee or take a hand in the convention deliberations. For the first time in 20 years the former Secretary of War will stay at home this year during a Democratic convention.

"Every member of the Democratic party who knows its traditions and is proud of its history has a duty to protest against the proposed abandonment of the two-thirds rule at Chicago," the former Secretary of War said in a statement.

"The two-thirds rule has made and kept the Democratic party a national party. It has prevented the forcing of sectional candidates against the will of respectable majorities and if the rule is ever changed, it ought not to be by a convention elected under it or in the interest of any particular section or candidate.

"The Democrats of the United States have selected and instructed their delegates to Chicago in the expectation that the two-thirds rule would apply. Our representatives at Chicago have no right to change that rule after we have instructed our delegates."

Walsh of Montana in Doubt About Changing the Rules

Chicago, June 25—Senator Walsh of Montana arrived today and declared he was opposed to the two-thirds Democratic nominating rule in principle, but was not prepared to say whether it should be abolished by this convention.

The Mantanan, choice of the Roosevelt forces for permanent chairman of the convention, was asked if he would fight for that job.

"I'm in the fight now," Walsh said.

Kremer Talks Pep to National Committee

Chicago, June 25 (AP)—Immediately after the national convention adjourns the new Democratic national committee will meet to organize and prepare to take the campaign field.

J. Bruce Kremer, committeeman from Montana and a Roosevelt leader, made a "pep" talk to the present committee last night in which he said the time had come for the committee to fight and work for the Democratic party.

"I want to see the members of the committee carry responsibilities and not titles," he said amid an ovation.

CURLEY PARTY HEADS WEST

Mayor Curley, at the head of a small but enthusiastic Roosevelt-for-President party, leaves the North Station this afternoon on three cars attached to the Minute Man.

Chicago is their destination. "Win with Roosevelt" is their slogan. The mayor has with him his daughter, Miss Mary Curley; his three sons, Paul, Leo and George, and the Misses Loretta, Katherine and Elizabeth Bremmer, of Chicago, who have been his house guests the past few days.

The mayor's brother, John J. Curley, is making the trip; also the unfailing Edmund L. Dolan, City Treasurer.

Others in this party include City Collector William M. McMorrow, Assistant Corporation Counsels J. Burke Sullivan, Joseph A. Scolponetti, Henry Lawler, Edward Foye and Charles H. McGlue, former chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

Mayor John J. Murphy of Somerville, who went down in the Smith landslide over Roosevelt, is going along, and Mrs. Murphy with him.

Mayor Curley may not be a delegate and may not occupy a seat within the charmed circle, but he intends to make his presence felt before the resolutions committee at least.

Miss St. Pierre will again take the stand Monday.

Meanwhile a $10,000 damage action for a scenario against Mrs. Hutton, who is ill in a sanitarium and has not been told of the "love balm" suit against her husband, is under way, was ordered to trial.

In overruling a postponement plea of her attorneys, the court said sessions would be held at her bedside if necessary.

JEWEL THIEVES ELUDE POLICE

Using an attorney's stolen car, three jewelry thieves escaped in a hail of police bullets early today after breaking a window and seizing $300 in gems from a Washington st. store.

After the break, the auto roared through Washington st. to Summer st., by the South Station and out Dorchester ave., toward South Boston and Dorchester.

Patrolmen Andrew K. Adair and Frank Carney, in a police car, took up the chase at Washington st. and Temple pl.

The speedy machine of the attorney easily outdistanced the police car and the trail was lost at Broadway and Dorchester ave., South Boston.

At daylight, Roderick McPherson of Cedar Grove st., Dorchester, found the stolen sedan outside his home. He notified police and it was found to have been stolen last night from Atty. Harold R. Donaghue of 25 Carruth st., Dorchester, who maintains an office in Tremont st.

Adair and Carney next gave chase to a roadster near the South Station when the driver failed to stop.

Again shots were fired but the driver turned Atlantic ave., and into the yards of the American Express Company.

He ran his machine on the railroad tracks, abandoned it, leaped on a freight train and escaped.

Chinese Fails in Gas Suicide Plan

Chinatown's boast that no Chinese takes his own life was almost upset when Lee Dow, 60, of 5 Oxford pl., an unemployed restaurant worker, attempted suicide by means of illuminating gas. Suicides are considered rarities among the Chinese. At City Hospital his condition was reported as serious.

WOMEN BITTER TO 'KINGFISH' HUEY LONG

Chicago, June 25 (AP)—A harmony breakfast was laid today for Democratic national committeewomen—but they were far from accord on the "Kingfish" issue.

Nellie Tayloe Ross called her lieutenants into a breakfast conference to further the harmonizing at which she has worked quietly ever since she left Wyoming, where she once was Governor, to be an active vice-chairman of her party.

But Nellie's guests included women who cast more than half of the 52 votes that unsuccessfully opposed seating the Huey Long Louisiana delegation, that he has pledged to Roosevelt.

Mrs. Stella Hamlin, who fought the self-styled "Kingfish" through th long row before the national committee, said Long is "absolutely against women in politics."

Another characterized the Kingfish as "the rudest man that ever lived."

Among others present were two who sat on a ub-committee before which Long had declined to plead his case—and between this move and the climax, word had passed around that he "didn't want to waste time before a committee including five skirts."

A group of Louisiana women of the pre-Long aristocracy continued an open campaign against him. Miss Gladys Braezeale, slated for committeewoman and delegate by the anti-Long group, said the fight was "even better than we expected and not over yet by a long way."

Roosevelt Upheld Rules in 1924

New York, June 25 (INS)—In 1924, when Gov. Roosevelt was chairman of New York delegates backing Alfred E. Smith for President, he opposed abrogation of the two-thirds rule, the Sun said today, reprinting an interview he gave the Times at the time declaring:

"Leaving out the question of Smith, McAdoo or any other candidate, I doubt if any rules should be changed after the delegates are elected. But if it should appear the old rules are working a hardship on the party, that might be reason for a change next year."

N. Y. Delegates Leave in 4 Special Trains

Albany, N. Y., June 25 (AP)—The main body of New York's delegation to the Democratic national convention moves west toward Chicago today.

Four special trains over the New York Central, two of them carrying Tammany braves in the delegation and visitors, leave from New York city. One train has been chartered by the Queens County delegation and the fourth by the Bronx organization.

John F. Curry, Tammany leader, is to be chairman of the delegation and Mayor James J. Walker representative on the resolutions committee.

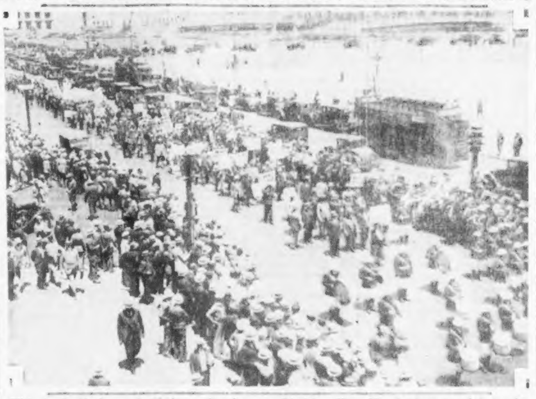
Chicago, June 25 (US)—Pledges from the victory fund campaign reduced the Democratic deficit today to $238,277.

MARYLAND, MY MARYLAND, ALL RITCHIE'S



With bands blaring and admirers shouting, the Maryland delegation to the Democratic national convention arrived in Chicago led by the State's favorite son, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie. The Marylanders paraded to the Congress Hotel and then started fighting to put Ritchie over the top next week. (International News Photos.)

CROWDS CHEER FOR RITCHIE

Chicago, June 25—Candidate row at the Congress Hotel, where Roosevelt, Ritchie, Smith, Garner, Reed, Byrd, Traylor and Murray signs jostle of every inch of wall and even ceiling space, was recovering today from the first real splurge of Ritchie cohorts and their Chicago friends yesterday and last night.

It was just a foretaste of what nomination day is going to be like; but it was a noisy one.

The Ritchie greeting was a thunderous affair, once the distinguished Marylander had been escorted to the famous Florentine room.

The night phase was different. It had a cultural quality with the ringing notes of soprano and contralto soloists vying with the hum of conversation in the general lobby of candidate row outside. A bevy of girls pressed Ritchie buttons on everybody, including Roosevelt leaders who stepped across the hall now and then to see what was going on.

Governor Ritchie himself spent much of the evening out in the air on the sidewalk of Michigan boulevard, gossiping with friends and unrecognized by crowding passersby.

Mayor in Warning to Dole Grafters

It is advisable for unworthy persons receiving relief from the city welfare department to withdraw from the list immediately, otherwise they will be speedily apprehended, Mayor Curley said today.

The mayor made this announcement after approving an order of the city council for establishment of a central index bureau which makes it easy for police to check up undeserving persons.

2 HAPPY WARRIORS SHAKE

ALFRED E. SMITH WM. G. McADOO

With smiles and no tears, Alfred E. Smith and William Gibbs McAdoo buried the hatchet when McAdoo called on Smith at Chicago, the first time they have met since 1924. Each man blocked the other from the Democratic nomination for President then and they have been two of the most bitter political antagonists of American history. Now they are friends, working shoulder to shoulder to prevent the nomination going to Franklin D. Roosevelt. (Wide World photos.)

What 'Al' and McAdoo Said as They Buried Hatchet

Chicago, June 25 (INS)—The most tantalizing mystery of the Democratic pre-convention period was solved today when International News Service learned what was said when former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York and former Secretary of the Treasury William Gibbs McAdoo ended an eight-year feud at their surprise peace conference Thursday.

The two great leaders, whose forces battled for 103 deadlocked ballots at the famous Madison Square Garden convention in 1924, have buried their political hatchets. They united in a drive to keep Franklin D. Roosevelt from being nominated—although for different reasons. Smith is fighting for his own nomination; McAdoo to nominate Speaker John N. Garner of Texas.

OLD SCARS HEALED

They have shaken hands and forgiven the past. An approximate transcript of their conversation, when McAdoo called on Smith, as recalled by both today, follows:

McAdoo: "Hello, Governor."

Smith: "Hello, Mr. Secretary."

McAdoo: "I just dropped in to pay you my respects."

Smith: "I'm glad to see you. Sit down."

McAdoo: "I'm making the rounds of the headquarters, Governor, and I wanted to greet you."

Smith: "Fine. I'm glad you dropped in."

McAdoo: "It's been a long time since we last met."

'TWAS A GOOD FIGHT

"Smith: "That's right. I haven't seen you since we met at the Garden in 1924."

McAdoo: "I guess you're right. We had quite a contest there, didn't we?"

Smith: "I'd say we did. We had quite a time of it."

McAdoo: "Well, that's all over now."

Smith: "It's all over with me."

McAdoo: "It was eight years ago and a lot has happened since then."

Smith: "No one knows that any better than I do."

McAdoo: "It's a good thing we have sense of humor, isn't it?"

Smith: "It sure is."

Smith: "Good-by. Call again, any time."

Garner Smiles Over "Vote" for Smith

Washington, June 25—Speaker John N. Garner was dropping various documents into the cornerstone of the new House office building at yesterday's dedication ceremonies when someone in the crowd asked whether he was casting a vote for Al Smith. Garner, with a broad smile, replied:

"Yes," and after a pause, added: "It would be a dead one."

In the Speaker's hand was a huge cigar, which he said was an "Al Smith" cigar given him by a New York Congressman.

Four N. E. State Groups to Demand Dry Repeal

Chicago, June 25 (AP)—Representatives of four New England delegations to the Democratic national convention—two favoring Roosevelt and two Smith for the presidential nomination—were prepared today to urge adoption of a platform plank for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Rhode Island's representative on the platform committee, former Senator Peter G. Gerry, made his position clear in a radio speech supporting Smith's candidacy and saying Smith was for "clear-cut repeal."

Robert G. Murchie of Concord, N. H., said his delegation would be solid for repeal.

Senator David I. Walsh will represent Massachusetts on the committee. Because of the session of Congress he was unable to get here before today.

Frank M. Duffy, national committeeman, and Fred C. Martin, chairman of the Vermont delegation, were here. The delegates are instructed for eventual repeal and immediate modification of the Volstead law. The delegation favors Roosevelt, though unpledged.

The New Hampshire delegates are pledged to Roosevelt and Murchie said they would follow the Roosevelt program, both in support of Senator Walsh as permanent chairman and in any move to abolish the two-third rule.

"I am against the rule and always have been," Murchie said, "because I think it's an anomaly in our Democratic form of government."

Geese Get Drunk After Agents Dump Home Brew in Rowley

Six silly geese that cared not for the source of their liquor—nor were stuck to pay for it—got considerably intoxicated in Rowley, it came out in Federal court today when John Stysen and his wife, Rose, of Rowley, were arraigned on liquor charges.

Mrs. Stysen was absolved of a charge of possessing liquor while her husband was held in $250.

When beer seized in the Stysen home was dumped by the raiders into an adjoining yard, dry agents testified, six geese went to the brew and soon were flapping their wings, honking deliriously and doing a bit of reeling.

DEMOCRATS OFF TO MEETING AT CHICAGO

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

With more troubles than they can shake a stick at, the New England Democrats left today for the grand melee at Chicago.

New Hampshire led the way. The Granite Staters, pledged to Roosevelt, and worrying about it, departed in a special car on the Twentieth Century from Boston this afternoon. Roped and tied by instruction of their voters in the Roosevelt-Smith battle, they are captained by the able Robert C. Murchie and will be awaited at the Windy City by Robert Jackson, who occupies the double role of Secretary of the National Committee and super-strategist of the Rooseveltian clans.

BATTLE IN MAINE

Maine leaves in parts, and may come back in pieces. Among those boarding the westbound trains was former Congressman Daniel J. McGillicuddy (Old Dan Mac), veteran of 20 years and more in a state where Democrats could once be counted on the fingers of both hands. Dan Mac is national committeeman and fighting to remain such. Younger men within the party are preparing to give him the dump. Their troubles are further developed by the fact they are pledged to Roosevelt and secretly yearn for a chance to break to Ritchie, or Baker or Smith.

Rhode Island started from Providence, commandeered and assembled by the youthful Democratic state chairman, Harold McGrath. Ex-Senator Peter Gerry, the actual boss, is already on the scene, struggling for a repeal plank against the noble experiment. Rhode Island is for Smith, first, last and forever.

RIORDAN LEADS GROUP

Charles F. Riordan, acting chairman of the Democratic State Committee, marshaled this party. He did not occupy the compartment with Joseph A. Maynard. Both seek the permanent chairmanship. Both claim it. Each claims that the other fellow is about the last one in the world who should be chosen for it. If a casualty list comes out of Chicago, look for their names at the top of it.

Daniel H. Coakley, a Smith delegate from Brighton, left on this train with this party. He is the one and only avowed candidate for Democratic national committeeman. He claims the pledges of 23 of the 36 delegates. But there are others in the party who put on a knowing smile and whisper in your ear, "Wait 'til Dan wakes up."

Senator Walsh has thus far refused to commit himself on the Coakley fight. So has Senator Coolidge. So has Governor Ely. If Coakley's enemies are to be believed, they don't want him for the post and may prevail upon Walsh to accept it. Therein is contained all the instruments and possibilities of a drag-out, knock-down fight.

"I have been called many names in my day," said Coakley, "but I have never been called a quitter. If I lose this fight, it will not be without a fight."

"FITZ" ASPIRES

John F. Fitzgerald, on the sunny side of 70 and still going strong, is flirting with the situation. He would like the post himself. He hesitates to make a contest for it against Coakley and the 23 Coakley pledges. M. Fred O'Connell of Fitchburg, was under consideration for the job. They thought he might pull the Western State delegates to him from Coakley but O'Connell made the mistake of being caught in a private visit to Roosevelt and he is now viewed by the brethren with more suspicion than popularity.

There is yet talk of "drafting" Mayor Winter of Springfield. But the Coakley people intimate Winter is for Daniel. So, there you have a fight with only one combatant in the arena stripped for action.

Governor Ely, today attending the wedding of his son in Pennsylvania, will join the party tomorrow at Chicago.

SENATORS TO ATTEND

Walsh and Coolidge are moving over from Washington. Congressmen Douglass, Grandfield, Connery and McCormack are already en route from the capital to the Chicago Stadium, scene of the internecine Democratic battle.

But the departing party has plenty of talent, headed by Fitzgerald, District Attorney Foley, Gen. Charles H. Cole, the original Smith-for-President gladiator, not to mention the women delegates-at-large, Mrs. Helen G. Rotch, of the Social Register, and Mrs. Mary Bacigalupo, whose sweet face shows a thousand years of Italian lineage.

HOOVER ATTACK ON AID BILLS ASSAILED

Washington, June 25 (AP)—Defending his $2,300,000 relief bill against an attack by President Hoover, Senator Wagner (D., N.Y.) told the Senate today the Chief Executive "throughout the depression has been wrong, late and futile."

The New Yorker contended the measure which Mr. Hoover said contained "porkbarrel" and "wasteful" expenditures, would do much to end unemployment and bring back prosperity.

RAINEY IN ATTACK

Representative Rainey, Democratic leader, told newspapermen that Mr. Hoover's criticism yesterday at his semi-weekly press conference, "shows he stands for doles, and that is all."

Wagner said President Hoover "was wrong when he announced on March 7, 1930, that within 60 days the depression would be over. He was wrong more recently when he declared that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would contribute to the resumption of employment and the stabilization of prices and that no more direct methods were necessary.

AID TO BIG BUSINESS CITED

Speaker Garner said:

"We loan the shipping interests many millions of dollars at a very low rate of interest and it's all right; when we try to do something for all the people it's 'pork barrel.' To serve special interests is statesmanship; to serve the people is pork."

HIS EMINENCE THE CARDINAL ON RADIO

Tomorrow evening, 6 to 6:30 daylight saving time, a speech over the air will come from Cardinal O'Connell on the topic, "The Significance of the International Eucharistic Congress," just closing in Ireland.

This speech will take the place of the regular program on the Catholic Hour, and will have a wide hookup. An appropriate musical program will accompany the address.

CATHOLIC RADIO PERIOD

Broadcast from Station WNAC (The Shepard Stores, Boston) every Sunday afternoon from 1 to 2 p. m.

Program for Sunday, June 26:

Question Box, Rev. M. J. Ahern, S. J.

HELP THE FAITH

The State Court of the Catholic Daughters of America will present the musical comedy "The Wild Rose" at the Elizabeth Peabody House Theater, 357 Charles St., Boston, on June 29th, for the benefit of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith.

The cast will be composed of the members of The State Court Choir.

They have given the performance on a previous occasion and their presentation was enthusiastically received. The tickets are 75 cents; obtainable at the Propagation of the Faith Office, 75 Union Park st., Boston.

JOINS CATHOLICS

The reception into the Catholic Church of Dr. William Edwin Orchard, famous English non-conformist preacher, which took place in Rome, has made a most profound impression on England, according to word received here. His Eminence Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, sent congratulations.

WIN SCHOLARSHIPS

Three boys from Dorchester and two from Hyde Park won the five scholarships awarded by Boston College high school to the grammar school graduates attaining the highest marks in the annual competitive examination. Nearly 500 schoolboys from all parts of New England participated in the examination.

WARNS WOMEN

Although acclaiming the new status of women in modern civilization as something more in conformity with God's will than the ancient subordination of the female sex, the Rev. Dr. Curran, speaking in the course of the "Catholic Hour," last Sunday, warned against the dangers inherent in certain tendencies today whereby woman "runs the risk of sacrificing her greatest triumph in allegiance to that which is merely secondary and transitory."

FIRST MASS

Tomorrow, Rev. John A. O'Cal-'aghan, S. J., will celebrate his first olemn high mass at 10:30 o'clock n the Immaculate Conception hurch, Harrison ave., Boston.

Father O'Callaghan was ordained o the priesthood on Monday morn-ng, June 20, at Weston College, Veston, Mass., by the Rt. Rev. Thomas A. Emmet, S. J., D. D., icar Apostolic of Jamaica, British West Indies.

TRUTH GUILD

This coming Sunday is scheduled for the topic of "The Blessed Virgin." "Devotion to the Blessed Virgin" will be treated by William E. Kerrish; "Mary, Mother of God and Man," by J. E. Reid; the "Immaculate Conception," by A. W. Hommel, and "All Graces Through Mary" by T. Brady.

Pastor Brooks Prepares to Leave

Tomorrow is the last Sunday of the season for the Rev. Arthur T. Brooks of the Dudley St. Baptist Church in Roxbury. He will sail soon for Scandinavia, where he will spend most of his summer. His itinerary also includes the British Isles.

Such a wonderful reception was given Pastor Brooks and his "Old New England Choir" last Sunday evening that a similar evening will be staged on Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. With his choir in costume and the platform arranged as an old-fashioned New England interior, the pastor and his choir will give the Gospel in song and story. Beautiful old hymns such as "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "The Sweet Bye and Bye," "Throw Out the Life Line," "Softly and Tenderly Jesus Is Calling," "Blessed Assurance," "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Break Thou the Bread of Life," "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Hiding in Thee" will be sung. Pastor Brooks will sing by request, "Have Faith in God" and "The Silver Cord Will Break."

Does College Bring Material Success?

Among the questions put to Dr. A. Z. Conrad to be answered tomorrow evening from his pulpit is the one, "Does College Contribute to Material Success?" Others are, "Does Not St. Paul's Policy of All Things to All Men Tend to Hypocracy?", "How Is One to Treat Impudent Personal Questions by Inquisitive People?", "May Not the Idea of Abstinance on Account of a Weak Brother Be Much Overdone?", "If Law Controls Then How Can Liberty Be a Fact?"

Tomorrow morning Dr. Conrad will preach on the theme, "God's Love Practicalized, Effectualized and Appropriated." In the evening, "Bewildered, Bewitched, Bedeviled—Why, How?; Sanity, Sincerity, Serenity."

New School

N. E. COUNCIL HEARS CALLAN

Fairlee, Vt., June 25—Flexibility in working schedules rather than any arbitrary shortening of the working week will emerge as a result of present business conditions, Prof. J. G. Callan, of Harvard School of Business Administration told the New England Council at its 26th quarterly meeting.

"The present low level of employment is traceable in substantial part to inadequacy of the credit structure, particularly lack of control of long-term credit," Prof. Callan declared.

"Shorter hours as a remedy correlates particularly with technological unemployment. Machinery and the organization of industry had enabled the average industrial worker to do the work formerly done by three, to draw the wages of the three, and to release the other two for jobs that the same industrial and technical advances provided.

"Thus there had been a sort of race between technological employment and labor-saving unemployment, which had ended not quite in a dead heat, since hours had been somewhat shortened, and unemployment was rising before the depression. So far, industrial advance has provided us with a great increase in goods and a small increase in leisure."

Good Registration for N. E. Institute

Under the auspices of the American Friends Service there is being held in Wellesley College a New England Institute of International Relations. This is a new venture for these parts as it is an intensive summer school for the purpose of preparing students, young and old, to spread the ideals of internationalism in an intelligent manner. A faculty has been secured thoroughly capable and well acquainted with present-day problems troubling the nations of the earth.

Each evening until July 2 in Billings Hall there will be held lectures open to the public. Tomorrow evening the Rev. Jones T. Corrigan of Boston University will be heard on "The Position of the Catholic Church in Relation to Peace and War." Recently he gave a similar talk in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. On Monday evening will come an address by one of the best known Japanese diplomats, Senior Natobi, who made himself unpopular recently with the war party in his own country because of his lack of sympathy with Manchurian and Chinese policies. Natobi married a Philadelphia Quaker and is known for his pacifist tendencies. Norman Thomas, Socialist leader and candidate for the presidency, is down for a lecture on Economic Planning and World Peace for Tuesday evening. Wednesday evening comes Prof. Edward Ely Curtis, Wellesley professor, who will discuss the United States Policy in Latin-America. Prof. Harold H. E. B. Speight of Dartmouth College has taken for his Thursday evening theme, "The American Citizen's Responsibility for International Peace."

Zionist Convention Gathers in Holyoke

The 11th annual convention of the New England Zionist Region is being held this evening and tomorrow in Holyoke, at Hotel Nonotuck. Large delegations from various parts of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont are participating.

Harry B. Berman of Holyoke heads the Holyoke convention committee. Bernard W. Marcus of Boston heads the New England Zionist Region committee. Among the outstanding Zionist leaders who are to address the convention are: Louis Lipsky, national chairman of the American Palestine Campaign; Jacob Fishman, editor of the Jewish Morning Journal; Judge Jacob J. Kaplan, chairman of the Greater Boston American Palestine Campaign committee; Rabbi Samuel Price of Springfield, Rabbi Reuben J. Magil of Springfield, Rabbi Harry Kaplan of Pittsfield and Rabbi Harry Leib Forer of Holyoke.

BABSON'S IDEAS ON ATTENDANCE WIDELY READ

The Federal Council of Churches in New York city has thought so well of Roger W. Babson's recent speech at Northfield on "Why people do not go to church" that they have had reprints sent to churches and ministers throughout the country.

Among other sentiments the Wellesley business man expressed are such as:

"For churches to close this summer is like hospitals closing during an epidemic. I say this because an epidemic of fear, such as is raging today, is as dangerous as an epidemic of 'flu,' such as raged in 1918. The need of the hour is not more money, more real estate, or more stocks and bonds, but more self-control, more unselfishness, more faith and more courage.

"Self-control, unselfishness, faith and courage are spiritual qualities which cannot be secured from bankers or stores, but only from vital religion. In behalf of the discouraged business men, the unemployed wage-workers and the millions of others in trouble today, I beg of ministers to minister to the wants of these people at this critical hour. An economic recovery is only awaiting a spiritual revival.

"Preachers wonder why they do not have better church attendance. Is it not because they are failing to give a message which will truly help the bewildered people of the present day? Business men, wage-workers and mothers are today primarily interested in how to pray and how to trust in God, and what to do that they may exist. Under ordinary circumstances it is all right to preach about abstract theological or sociological problems, but today men and women want personal and immediate help in solving pressing needs and in making momentous decisions. It is the ability to make decisions correctly which people really want rather than any material thing, and this wisdom is a spiritual quality, which only religion can give."

'These Mighty Works Not Supernatural'

A subject chosen for all Christian Science Churches tomorrow deals with the natural workings of the Divine Spirit.

"Christian Science" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow.

The Golden Text is: "When ye received the word of God which ye heard of us ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe" (I Thessalonians 2:13).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The physical healing of Christian Science results now, as in Jesus' time from the operation of divine Principle, before which sin and disease lose their reality in human consciousness and disappear as naturally and as necessarily as darkness gives place to light and sin to reformation. Now, as then, these mighty works are not supernatural, but supremely natural" (Pref. xi 9).

Boston Clergyman Gets Drastic Cut

One clergyman of Greater Boston several months ago took a cut in his salary of 25 per cent and adjusted his budget so that he could manage with extreme economy. More recently his board felt compelled to ask that he take another 25 per cent reduction. He now begins to believe he is among those whom Jesus called blessed, but he is not sure he has inculcated his congregation with Christian principles.

The Present Belongs to Youth . . . What Is He Doing With It?

Nothing Right Till It Is Beautiful'

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick has t into words what many clergy-en believe sincerely in their arts. There is a movement mong ministers of smaller hurches to make the yards about eir houses of worship attractive s any private estates.

In Tamworth, N. H., the Quaker eeting house, where Whittier ocasionally attended service, is reeiving the attention of interested embers. Miss Evelyn Spaulding, ho has just graduated from a chool of landscape architecture, as drawn a plan for the church wn which, if carried out, should ake the plain building a much ore attractive church home.

In the current Church Militant the Rev. Robert H. Smith writes:

"Many parishioners would find a garden club the thing but most essential of all is the co-operation of a good sexton, who takes pride in the church looking its best. When people stop to admire our lawns it comes easy to invite them to the equally beautiful interior of the church also, and there to 'worship God in the beauty of holiness.'"

Eighty Children Baptized at Once

Eighty children were baptized at Center Methodist Episcopal Church, Malden, on Children's Sunday. This is a record number for that church, of which Dr. George E. Heath is the pastor and Rev. M. M. Thornburg the associate pastor.

President Marsh Goes to South America

"The Living Christ" is a general theme chosen by the World's Sunday School convention to be held this year in Rio Jeneiro, South America. President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University, has been asked to speak on "The Living Christ in Education." He will sail from New York July 9 and return Sept. 5.

Methodists Pick Name for Camp

Many camp directors and camp planners have difficulty in choosing an appropriate and attractive name for their camps. The Methodists solved their Bradford Camp for Boys problem by naming it "Camp Long Sought For," and the lads are content to be there. Dr. Azariah P. Reimer has general oversight of these boys who come from all parts of Boston.

Episcopals Have Busy Camp Season

Young people of the Episcopalian Church of Boston and of Massachusets believe in camp. Religious life is not forgotten nor are ethical standards lowered for the out-of-doors. Hundreds of young people are preparing for some time this summer in one of the many beautiful locations. The camps are located in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Camp O-at-ka, Camp William Lawrence, Camp Lincoln, Fleur de lis camp, Fitzwilliam, N. H.

Clergymen Must Play; Why Not?

A minister of the gospel in Brockton has just bought himself a monoplane. He has decided to become a sky pilot in more ways than one.

An Episcopal clergyman of Fall River owns a telescope and also a microscope. He says he can make a parish visit to the farthest stars and then delve into the playground of the electron and proton. He and his wife are looking forward to August 31, when they hope to take a series of photographs of the total eclipse that crosses Canada, Vermont and New Hampshire.

A group of priests belonging to one of the large parishes of Greater Boston have invested in a motor boat and hope to see something of the coast this summer.

AS THE TWIG IS BENT - SO THE TREE INCLINES

Reverence for the Law

"LET reverence for the law be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles in her lap," said President Hoover in an address on law enforcement and obedience. He was quoting Abraham Lincoln.

The President had pointed out the appalling number of crimes in the United States---a record of 10,000 human beings lawlessly killed every year, with half that number of arrests and comparatively few convictions.

The records revealed that an amazing number of these crimes were committed by young men---boys in their "teens."

Hunger for excitement, desire for money to gratify their passion for pleasure, theft, discovery, murder! That was the sequence in thousands of these crimes.

But back of all was the disrespect for law. And how much of that disrespect was learned in the home? That is the question many persons might ask themselves.

LAWS are not as simple as in the days of the Ten Commandments. Many citizens disagree as to the wisdom of some of the laws on the statute books.

But nevertheless, the laws are there, and it is the duty of the good citizens to obey them.

The boy or girl who sees one law disregarded by his parents is not likely to see a difference between that law and other laws. If one is broken, why not all?

Obedience to the law is the foundation of character. And not only the written statutes but that code which is behind them all and greater than them all---the code of ethics.

It requires no lawyer to interpret that code. One need only ask himself: "Is this right or is it wrong?"

When one has made his own home law-abiding, when he has taught his children from the beginning that doing the right thing is a matter-of-course, then he need have little fear that they will grow into criminals.

This educational endeavor is made possible by the following public spirited citizens who are striving to make our community a finer and a better place in which to live.

DRAMA DISCUSSED By Nicholas Young ◆ Jean Harlow Is Siren Star in 'REDHEADED WOMAN'

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Flight:

Nothing that's beautiful seems near.
In vain I long to overhear
The singing of a lark in flight,
Or sniff a garden in the night.

I think that Beauty fled the scenes
In terror at our loud machines.
—RAY CHARON.

Breaks!

A vaudeville duo had been having tough breaks all year . . . Recently they landed a good booking, and after their first show were seated in a restaurant casting looks of love and affection at a couple of large steaks on the plates before them . . . They looked very happy —but suddenly a shadow crossed the brow of one of them . . . "Oh dear," he sighed, "the first steaks we've eaten in months and nobody in here to catch us!"

Made No Diff!

A carnival man we chatted with recently has great respect for police intelligence . . . "It's surprising how quick they get smart," he told us . . . "One year three carnivals played a certain nearby town where no carnival had ever played before . . . All three carnivals were loaded down with 'science and skill' games, where the customers had little chance of winning, as the skill required was almost superhuman . . . These carnivals were able to pay a certain police official $500 apiece, due to their winnings from the suckers . . . Next year a new outfit arrived in the same town . . . This outfit specialized in straight gambling games, where the show, of course, had a large edge, but in which it was quite possible for the customer to come off the winner . . . This same police official (which we'll not name here) showed up . . . He wanted $500 . . . It was explained how this sum was impossible since, this time, the customer might win . . . "These are straight gambling games," he was told, "and that means we don't always win . . . The shows that played here last year had 'skill and science' games, where not one in a thousand would have the skill and science to win" . . . "Well," said the police officer, "then you'd better dash around and get some of those games or you'll not open here!"

Snoops Here and There:

Boston's Newcomb W. Rosin and Gotham's shoe expert, Harry Schrey, are motoring through the Catskills. The thought of former Lido-debbie Nora Cliffe leaving Panama soon for the Hub, changes handsome free lance William Kane, attorney, who helped the vivacious brunette get her divorce, into a romantic and blushing schoolboy . . . Wouldn't be at all surprised if there'll be a slipping on of the gold circle there some day! . . . Most novel billing Sevitzky ever received when a line-rule was accidentally omitted from a "Met" ad so it read: "Red Donahue and his mule Fabian Sevitzky" . . . In rube fashion did those men gather about that crimson racing car, No. 22, parked near the Fenway yesterday afternoon . . . Small boys couldn't have done a better job of examining and working all the parts . . . Which reminds us that everyone in town will motor out to those Rockingraces of Dick Dunn's tomorrow afternoon . . . Did you ever hear of "Back-Number" Wilkins who has converted an old barn out near Danvers into a magazine chest containing all the back numbers of the oldest magazines in the world? . . . Marjorie Adams seen lunching yesterday . . . Glowing complexion and tales of her recent month in Southern waters . . . Ruby Newman has an odd pet peeve—women who won't eat when dining with him . . . That can't happen these days! . . . The same building (5-ct. Saving Bank Bldg.) houses the present chairman of the Boston finance commission, Frank Goodwin, and Michael H. Sullivan, past commissioner . . . Attractive Phyllis Ripley is an ex-Ned Wayburn dance pupil who intends to build herself a career some of these days . . . In the meantime, she brings you what you crave out at Walter's in Coolidge Corner . . . Tennis Star Vincent Richards' hobby is wrestling . . .

Sincere (?)

At a revival held here not long ago, the gent who took the collections away from the ushers was standing with his cash box under his arm when two devotees rushed up to him . . . "Oh, isn't it marvelous!" they cried . . . "what wonderful work you folks are doing in religion's cause!" . . . The revival cashbox-man turned to a friend and muttered, "Come on—let's get away from these nuts." . . . 's true, so help us because we heard it!

Secret's Out!

That Beacon street's Georges de Lys and Peggy Runyeon of Reading, Pa., said all those words that made them one-and-onlyed on April 13 . . And they're not superstitious and terribly happy about it.

Year's Record Told in Revue

A summer "jubilee revue," entitled "Hi-Lites of 1932," is the stage attraction this week at the Keith-Boston. The star is Jimmy Savo, late of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," and famous pantomime comic, who gets all the laughs without saying a word, and who in this show presents a hilarious offering, "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries."

Gallo Takes Hub Season of Opera

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

Whatever the defections which may next season deprive Boston of its regular flurry of Chicago Opera, there still remains Signor Fortune Gallo and his San Carlo Opera Company. If you can believe all the news reports, Mr. Samuel Insull has drifted into something like retirement on a very comfortable pension. That, in itself, splashes a complete quietus upon any opera season.

There will be no opera in Boston next year—unless the ardent disciples cry for it, or unless some courageous soul listens to the call and risks his reputation, his songbirds and his prospects, Fortune Gallo, lending an earnest ear to the fervent supplicants, has responded by moving into town for no better purpose than plucking three weeks of time from the Boston Opera House in October. Primarily, Mr. Gallo proposes to give Boston an opera season when all the fates are against it. News dispatches have explained why there could be no Chicago Opera; from the same sources it has been made known that New York's sacrosanct Metropolitan refused to consider a modest Boston season of two weeks.

Not to be deterred by these ominous reports, Fortune Gallo contracted Mr. Jules Murray of the Shubert booking department and tied up the Boston Opera House for two weeks, with an option on a third, for late October and early November days. Caught in snug quarters at the Touraine, Mr. Gallo confessed everything; it was something of a qualified confession. Excepting one or two occasions, when the fates or his own management were against him, he has always made opera pay in these regions. Mr. Gallo's first appearance here as an impresario was in 1910, close upon the heels of Henry Russell, who later was to create the Boston Opera Company and to persuade Eben Jordan, Jr., to build the present palace known as the Boston Opera House.

The tide of opera here and in the hinterlands has ebbed and flowed. Henry Russell's experiment followed the usual course of strategy predicated upon investment and angels—as against genuine art and its natural development. Russell failed. Gallo succeeded. One was the artist with no conception of business, the other was a business man with a fine sense of what made the machinery run. And so, with no flourish of trumpets—Fortune Gallo makes opera that pays its own way. There is no boasting, for that part of the San Carlo operations is simple; there is no fanfare about artists—the Chicago and Metropolitan have hitherto taken care of all that.

But the operas which Mr. Gallo proposes to call to hand are the same great works which the wabbling Chicago company exploited so eloquently with a Samuel Insull endowment, and which the gilded Metropolitan assembled for its refulgent patrons. As it turns out, the forthcoming opera season must beat out its own paths. With Chicago and the Metropolitan out of it, Mr. Gallo should find rather easy going.

Old Master Mimer Himself Is Here, Topping Orpheum's Bill

George Sidney brings the breath of the golden era of the stage, to the Loew's Orpheum this week. Best of all the screen stars is this master performer; in person he can stir laughter or beget that gulp in the throat which betokens the expert thespian.

This Mr. Cohen of the silver sheet, partner of Charlie Murray, also beloved hereabouts, in all those Cohen and Kelley exploits at home and abroad, turns in a novel act. We recall him of his former footlight efforts, always sterling; and that same label marks his work of today. To find him on a vaudeville bill, is a rare joy, for he brings to the program the kind of talent that made variety great in the old days. But now he just more than merely entertains; he goes in for novelty in his use of the screen to supplement his acting.

Mere mention of his name in an introductory way is the cause for tremendous applause; and then when he appears the house gives him an ovation. He wows them just as he has always done, and no lover of stage or films should miss seeing this truly stellar actor.

Manager Victor J. Morris backs the headliner up with a superb bill. There is Earle Nelson, radio favorite and a splendid singer. Other fine acts are those of Bob Robison & Company, Sierak's "modern miracles" and Arthur La Fleur, novelty acrobat.

Featured on the screen is Tom Mix in a talkie, "Destry Rides Again," wherein the cameras develop a story that is chiefly action, and entertaining throughout. There is a Thelma Todd-Zasu Pitts "short" that is a comic riot of laughs.

A tiptop show in every way.

H. S.

ROLLICKING ROISTERERS IN WEEK'S NEW PLAY BILLS

Sari Maritza and Gene Raymond exchange warm courtesies in "Forgotten Commandments," current film at the Fenway, Modern and Beacon.

Anne Grey, a leading personage in the English film, "Bachelor's Folly," which starts the week on Monday at the Fine Arts. The story is an Edgar Wallace opus of peril and excitement.

Comedy Rides 'Dark Horse'

"The Dark Horse," featured at the Paramount and Uptown, is a brisk and breezy film comedy, so close to being a "natural" that it misses but by a hair. It is the gayest thing since Marie Dressler and Polly Moran last disported upon the screen, as filled with good hearty laughs as a porcupine's back is with quills.

The picture is a hilarious satire upon American politics and politicians, expertly conceived and achieved, and a credit to director, cast and producers. It is easily one of the best cinema comedies of the year. Clever craftsmanship marks it in every point—every department is nicely handled. Alfred E. Green, directorial ace, has fashioned a picture that should hit the high spots for the Warners.

The story concerns the ups and downs of a political campaign, and its manager, a more or less rascally chap, who knows how to handle men. There's many a sly dig at well known methods used by the pols in the good old U. S. A. Sometimes the humor is broad, sometimes of the slapstick variety; but always the fun is exuberant and surefire.

Warren William, quickly established as one of the screen's best leading men, is here at his best, superior even to William Powell in "High Pressure." Grave or gay, William is perfect and the bright lines snap from his lips with the crispness of the crack of a whip's lash. Guy Kibbee is uproariously funny as the dumb candidate. And all the rest of the cast rides on the crest of the wave, along with the stars.

"The Dark Horse" gave us more laughs than we have enjoyed in a single hour in a long, long time.

H. S.

'Mouthpiece' Is on the Bill

The companion picture is "No Greater Love."

Owing to the popularity of the Sharkey-Schmeling fight films they will be continued Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Metropolitan Has Gala Show for Publix Happiness Week

By HARRIS MORGAN

Happiness, as a slogan, must have a charm to lure in the patrons. The queues in front of the Metropolitan yesterday indicated that the answer to Ted Lewis' "Is Everybody Happy?" must be that everybody wants to be happy. The theater's show for Happiness Week is a good one, both on stage and screen.

The picture featured for the gala week is "The Man From Yesterday." Its theme is something of an Enoch Arden echo, but is given up-to-date motivation and treatment. Claudette Colbert, to us, is always pleasing; Clive Brook usually gives good account of himself. Here these two are cast together, albeit the story takes them apart. There isn't any one in Hollywood who can conjure up the same kind of charm and beauty as Miss Colbert; those big, sweet, sad eyes of hers can work overtime, hauling upon the reservoir of sentiment. She is a clever actress and surpasses even Mr. Brook in this film.

There's a wartime beginning. These two wed in Paris. An hour with her, and the hero is off for the front. She becomes a nurse, and hears he is dead in the trenches. An army surgeon makes love to her, and in time she returns the affection. Then chance, which had sent Mr. Brook into Germany, a prisoner, puts him in the wife's way.

There are big moments in the story, which is nicely set and acted.

The stage show is "Chains," colorfully produced, and brimming with talent of various kinds.

The footlight triumph goes to Stoopnagle and Budd, a couple of stars out of radioland. They must have a legion of admirers, for this house waxese nthusiastic receiving them. Then they reel off melody and mirth in rapidfire fashion, and furnish highlight entertainment.

Mr. Sevitzky is royally acclaimed with his orchestra, after he has led them through Mascagni music.

Gayety Theater

Starting tomorrow the Gayety screen will feature "Lena Rivers," with Charlotte Henry, Beryl Mercer, and Morgan Galloway, and "Sunshine Susie" with Renate Muller and Jack Hulbert.

For Other Amusement Ads See Next Page.

Art Supreme

The Fine Arts Theater will have another premiere Monday, featuring Herbert Marshall and Edna Best, stage and screen favorites, playing the leads in "Bachelor's Folly," based on Edgar Wallace's stage play, "The Calendar."

This charming couple recently closed a long engagement of John Van Druten's play, "There's Always Juliet." Herbert Marshall is being co-starred with Marlene Dietrich in Hollywood.

Singer Shares With Comic

Headline honors on the seven-act stage bill at the New Keith Theater this week are divided between RKO's newest vaudeville star, Everett Marshall, brilliant singer and actor, and Herb Williams, eccentric comedy star and late of Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

Marshall is heard in a special program of modern songs, while Williams, assisted by Miss Doris Ewing, Basil Whitfield and Harry Long, presents the droll clownings and comedy that have made him an international favorite.

Other featured stars on the vaudeville bill include the singer, Alice Joy, radio's "dream girl," known to millions through her broadcasting; "The Ingenues," an outstanding girl band; Carl Shaw, eccentric dancer, in a skit called "Gotta Get a Girl"; King Brothers and Cully in "What of It?" and the famous Chinese team, the On Wah troupe.

Another Week of the Pops

The Pop concerts will bring their 47th season to a close next Saturday, in Symphony Hall, when Arthur Fiedler will stress the music of Wagner and of Gershwin on his final program.

On Monday night, the request program will have its third performance.

On Thursday night, Gershwin's Concerto in F, the first Boston performance of which was at the Pops, was one of the events of the season, will be repeated with Sanroma as soloist.

Platinum Locks Turned Titian, Actress Shines Along With Big Cast

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Hand the decision, without protest, to Jean Harlow for taking it on the chin. "Redheaded Woman," now featured at Loew's State, presents the famous queen of beauty with about the most ungracious role in many a blue moon. But this mademoiselle of the erstwhile platinum hair accepts it, and makes it an outstanding characterization. It is a part likely to alienate sympathy and arouse feminine ire. But that isn't her fault; she took what was assigned, and made the most of it.

Jean Harlow

"Redheaded Woman," as cinema, hangs upon the excellence of it acting. Folk like Lewis Stone, worthy of stardom himself, Chester Morris, Leila Hyams and Una Merkel give it a tremendous lift over the many rough spots in its jazzy course. Out of a mediocre story they together weave, with Miss Harlow always holding the "spot," a screen narrative that is entertaining, and sometimes highly diverting. But if seriously to be considered, the picture is best regarded, for its own sake, as a satire upon all such siren films, of past, present or future. It goes them all one better—rings in all the old bank-o'-hair hokum, and gives one an eyeful and an earful.

Eyeful?

Earful?

On that angle of the risky touches, "Redheaded Woman" probably outpaces all its predecessors of this type. This should make it "good box office." As to the plot it smacks of what one has often encountered in sexy pictures; and when we wondered, audibly, whether Katherine Brush had authorized it this way —for Miss Brush is a wondrously gifted writer—a young lady ventured her definite statement that she had read the novel and that it widely varied from the film version.

But Miss Harlow acts up to the role, and makes it so real that one needn't be surprised by the remarks the ladies are making roundabout. Stone is, as always, magnificent. Morris is convincingly clever; and the female talent in the film is made threefold by the superb work of Misses Merkel and Hyams.

The State has a superb surrounding program. The Charlie Chase comedy is a corker, crimful of fun. The newsreel is particularly fine, the best, in our opinion, of the day.

Nils Asther Wins Lead in General Yen Film by Girls' Ballot

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service, Inc.
Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service.

Los Angeles, June 25—Fifty girls—secretaries, stenographers, telephone operators, the complete feminine aggregation at Columbia studios—have chosen the general for "The Bitter Tea of General Yen." Out of the 50 girls interviewed, 48 voted for Nils Asther to play the glamorous and colorful role of the general.

Louella O.Parsons

Fifty-two actors were considered and 34 tests made. Out of all the prospective candidates, Nils won hands down. Barbara Stanwyck, who plays the feminine lead, assisted in most of the tests to find the right General Yen.

Edward Paramore has been given the exceedingly difficult task of putting this fantastic tale into motion picture language, or, should I say, form.

A Line or Two

Have you noticed Russell Hopton, by any chance, in the various pictures? He has made nine pictures this year. And that is plenty, isn't it? He had his option at Universal renewed. One thing about Russell Hopton, he is versatile. One day he plays the villain and the next the leading man. Hardie Albright took a chance when he played one scene in "Three on a Match,' as a favor to Mervyn Le Roy, without pay. He did that scene so well they built up the part and he found himself a job. Darryl Zanuck returns to Hollywood Saturday. Paul Muni is expected to arrive in our midst on the same day. He and Mrs. Muni are traveling via the Panama Canal with L. Wolfe Gilbert, well known song writer. Mr. Gilbert comes here to join his wife and children, and Paul Muni to take up his job. Stuart Erwin, who is said to have done a master job in the talkie version of "Merton of the Movies," and, goodness me, I just can't remember the title the name has been changed so much, has been signed for a part in "Madame Butterfly."

What does this mean, if anything? Douglas Fairbanks has gone to Arizona by train with Howard Hawks to look over the Billy the Kid country, Tombstone and all the ghost towns where the youthful and baby-faced bandit formerly roamed will be a part of the Fairbanks-Hawks survey. Does it mean that Doug is going to make a picture with Billy as the hero? Johnny Mack Brown, not so very long ago, made a Billy the Kid picture, one that will not go down in history, however, as a screen epic. Johnny today signed to play the role of an all-American halfback in "70,000 Witnesses."

Looks Like Love

Dorothy Lee, looking more like a high school girl than ever, is back from the east. Dorothy says she didn't run out on her contract with Bert Wheeler because there was never any arrangement with Bert to appear in vaudeville with him. She does say, however, that she and Fred Waring have parted forever and that Marshall Duffield, former football hero, is the one man in her life. In other words, she and Marsh will step off one of these days in a matrimonial two step. The romance of Joan Blondell and George Barnes, ace cameraman, is headed for the altar. Mr. Barnes is not yet legally free, but when he is Warners' popular star is going to say "I do." She and Mr. Barnes have been "that way" about each other for a long time.

Spent the best part of an afternoon on Marion Davies' set at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Lots of action and Marion wearing some stunning black pajamas with white frill around the neck, sort of a modified pierette effect. George La Guerre in a tea-drinking scene, also John Davidson and Ruth Renick, three w. k. stage players, all of them. Jimmie Durante does an original scene with a catchy song number composed on the spur of the moment by himself and Edmund Goulding. It's done in typical Durante style and when I tell you I saw Jimmie rehearse it four times you'll know it's good. The Rockey Twins, expert dance team, were dancing with Marion and Billie Dove. Both girls doing an impromptu acrobatic act and doing it well.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The Culver City dog races brought out a goodly and we must say, representative crowd for the opening night. BARBARA STANWYCK, perched on the arm of FRANK FAY'S chair, chered loudly and lustily for her favorite hound. MADGE EVANS, in white, escorted by the devoted TOM GALLERY, stopped to talk to GEORGE RAFT SALLY EILERS placed a wreath around the neck of a winner. HOOT GIBSON stood by, trying to dodge the cameras. BIG BOY WILLIAMS welcomed CHARLIE RAY, who is in Hollywood for the first time in several years. PEGGY MORROW, in a costume that suggests what every woman should wear at dog races, chatted with MRS. J. J. HAGGARTY, wife of the owner of the New York store. GINGER ROGERS, flaming locks easily discernable in the crowd, estimated at 20,000, walked up and down the paddock accompanied by MERVIN LE ROY. NORMAN FOSTER glimpsed in the crowd. Many of the film folk at the races adjourned to the Frolics. EVALYN KNAPP and DON COOK were seen dancing. EILEEN PERCY, RITA (Mickey Flynn) JIMMY DUNN and MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN and scores of others whose names are W. K. in the film colony. That's all today. See you Monday.

Oceanside Theater Is to Open Season July 18

The Oceanside Theatre at Magnolia, announces the opening of its season set for July 18. Six new plays will be presented. Vladimir Rosing will again direct the company.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

"—And Cabbages and Kings!"

Precarious business, this columning. A few words, sometimes innocently written, can do no end of damage. I feel almost miserable about the simple line I ran last week in which I stated that cases of defective eyesight were now being treated by an injection method. If I've received one, I've received almost two hundred letters from all parts of the country from men and women, begging me to disclose the name of the specialist offering the treatment. One elderly woman in Chicago has wired me that she is coming to New York and hopes I will take her to the doctor. A man in Brooklyn advises me that he hasn't been able to read in seven years, but that he has had my column read to him daily and that he has enough confidence in me to known that if I make a statement it must be so—would I refer him to the doctor? Well, the truth of the matter is a friend of mine has been receiving treatments for his failing eyesight—but investigation on my part reveals that it is not a new method—simply a strengthening of certain glands in his case which the specialist believes partly responsible for the poorness of his vision. Such treatment may be efficacious in his case only—and not in another one of thousands, so how can I go on record as recommending either the treatment or the specialist.

More business of upsetting a columnist. Yesterday I told you that Billy Leeds was abroad and probably wouldn't return for some time to come and even as you read the line Billy was arriving quietly, without fanfare of trumpets, right into Manhattan, and if he read the line must have chuckled at my expense. It's getting so you can't trust anybody these days. You try to keep a fellow over on the other side and he sneaks back on you and laffs in your face. You marry a fellow off to a girl and a few weeks later he calls you up on the phone and asks you to prove it, and when you explain weakly, a friend of a relative of his had given you the information, he sneers and then confounds you by appearing thereafter with another girl in public places. For instance, only last week, I confided to my millions of readers that contrary to the newspaper stories that Tommy Manville, Jr., the asbestos heir, had gone abroad with Marion Carewe to wed her there, he had actually slipped the wedding band on her finger in the pianissimo manner before they sailed. So the day before yesterday Tommy called me up and said mildly, "You're quite right, Louis, in spite of the newspapers, I didn't marry Marion aboard. And in spite of your line, I didn't marry her before I went abroad. As a matter of fact, Marion and I aren't married." Well, what are you going to do in view of that, even though you know he bought a wedding ring and an engagement ring?

Perhaps you've noticed a nice little blonde girl frequently with the renovated Sam Shipman these days and nights. I mean the new Sam Shipman who wears his hair combed back neatly and has a crease in his trousers and keeps his vest and tie clear of soup stains and cigarette ashes. The girl is Mildred Kaufman, daughter of a wealthy Wilkes-Barre, Pa., medico who, together with her brother, Alvin, has been camping here in Manhattan determined to storm the citadels of what we sneeringly call Tin Pan Alley. Mildred writes lyrics—Alvin composes music and even Maurice Chevalier once took one of their numbers and chanted it over the radio. Well, now Mildred has written a torch ballad and Sam Shipman, the playwright, mind you, has composed the music and I warn you not to get within 15 feet of Sam for he'll start singing the song from the first bar of the verse to the last bar of the chorus. Shipman, the playwright, has gone music mad. He wants to be America's leading composer and if he continues to write plays it'll be merely to keep the wolf from growling at his hotel door.

So Walter O'Keefe and Roberta Robinson are going to become Mister and Missus. What do you know about that? Last Saturday night I was in the El Garron where Roberta sings, and Walter O'Keefe came in but I didn't put two and two together until Rafael D'Aleva, without his monocle, called me over and said, "Louis, you want a scoop. That fellow—what's his name—O, yts — O'Keefe — he's veree, veree, what you call eet, sweet on Roberta. I think even they going to marry." So I laughed right in his face, suspecting a publicity yarn for good old El Garron and I said, "O sure, sure. Just like you once had me believing Dario and Diane were going to get married." Well, evidently I was the sap, for I had a Broadway scoop right in the palm of my delicate hand and let it slip away and now, in view of the O'Keefe-Robinson business, I'm beginning to wonder if D'Aleva wasn't telling me the truth about Dario and Diane, too.

Maury (Cholly Knickerbocker) Paul and I went to the fight together and having been duly cautioned against the evils of betting, Paul wagerd $5 that Schmeling would win and I wagerd an equal amount that Sharkey would win and, sometime today I hope, Mr. Paul will pay me the $5 he owes me, but what I'm getting at is this: Every so often, I'd point out some one and I'd say, "Look, Maury, there's Abe Attell or there's Abe Lyman," and he'd shrug his shoulders and say, "Indeed. Look Louis, there's young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt—I don't think he's more than 18—and there's Mr. S. Stanwood Menken—and Mrs. Menken—and, as I live, there's Rufus L. Patterson" and I'd say, "Oh yeah!" Which gives you an idea of what the eyes of a society reporter see at a fight—and the bleary eyes of a Broadway reporter see. But this I do know, fights are great levelers, for walking out, we both observed that society and Wall Street's greatest gentlemen were standing out in the gutter along with the Joe Zilches of the foundry works

Globe Trotter

Striking pictures before and after the world's championship heavyweight fight in which Jack Sharkey brought back the title to America by a decision over Max Schmeling, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News now at Loew's State. As the federal law denies the right to newsreels of showing the actual fighting, the pictures show the two contestants in the ring being introduced by Joe Humphreys and squaring off for the start of the battle and in their corners during the rounds. Then follows the announcement that Sharkey has won and the attendant scenes of excitement in the ring.

There are pictures of the vast crowd that gathered in the new Madison Square Garden bowl in Long Island City filling it to capacity. There are also pictures made of the contestants after the fight.

Happiness the Scollay Cue

The Scollay promises its patrons a great Happiness Week program of stage and screen attractions. The stage show will be headlined by the Broadway comedian, George Broadhurst, who brings a smart company in his latest comedy sketch "A Night in Greenwich Village.' The next big feature is the "Dancing Moderns," in an up-to-the-minute dance revue. Featured with them are Small, Harak and Lynd.

Joe Sullivan, noted hokum comedian and piano player, will have for his foil Helen Higgins, who sings and is an exceptional dancer. Frank Masters and Don Gautier, "Nonsense Burners," will do comedy talk, dancing and singing. The Rosebuds are four pretty girls, one of the youngest teams on the stage, who will do acrobatic dancing and fast tumbling.

The feature picture will be "Merrily We Go To Hell,' featuring Frederic March and Sylvia Sidney. For the benefit of the children, there will be another chapter of the talking version of James Fenimore Cooper's "The Last of the Mohicans," featuring Harry Carey and Edwina Booth.

PIN-HEAVERS' TITLE AT STAKE

After getting plenty of practice in the back yard of her home, Mrs. Beatrice Quinn of Dorchester will defend her title as rolling pin throwing champion of New England at the Boston Swimming Association track and field day at Norumbega Park Sunday.

Another contestant for the title is Florence McGlone of Natick, who has been practicing with a four-foot rolling pin. This year she threatens to bring the title back to Natick with her.

Other events on the program are a 50-yard dash, high jump, broad jump, javelin throw, discus throw and baseball throw.

About 130 girls are entered.

Portland, Me., June 25—The Maine Central railway reported a surplus after charges of $23,966 for May.

LABOR STIRRED BY 'ECONOMIC TERRORISM'

Washington, June 25 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor today charged the Civil Service Commission with "economic terrorism" in its recent order that federal employes must desist from political activity.

In its weekly news service clipsheet the Federation bluntly says that "the commission's rules are especially sinister in connection with the drastic pay cuts and other reactionary measures which the present Congress voted to impose on federal employes."

The commission several days ago called attention to its rule No. 1 which forbids a civil service employe from taking active part in a political campaign. Such action, it was said, would call for dismissal, whether taken individually or as a member of a group.

"Under the constitution," the federation said, "federal employes have the right to endeavor to defeat in the November elections members of Congress who voted a $2,000,000,000 dole from federal funds to banks and other institutions in financial distress and then slashed the pay of government employes nearly $100,000,000 a year on the pretext of balancing the budget."

LEG BROKEN ONCE MORE

She is the oldest woman ever to face trial for murder in New Hampshire, and probably in all New England—a bright little woman of keen mind, a once wealthy aristocrat fallen on evil days.

She is Cora Arabella Lyman Reynolds, whose father was Robert Henry Lyman, former United States consul in Honolulu. Her mother was Mary Willard Lyman, whose forebears owned all the land which is now divided into the towns of Lancaster, Sterling, Shirley and Clinton.

According to her son, she is a cousin of Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad.

In an old black suit and hat and a black and white shirtwaist—a page out of the fashions of years gone by—she was taken before Judge William L. Stevens in Concord court today to hear the charge of the State of New Hampshire against her.

Sheriff George A. Wooster, and her lawyer son, who will direct her kinship with Bay State aristocdefense at the trial, accompanied her. She is slightly lame, as the result of an accident, seven years ago, which sent her to Stewart's farm.

LIKE GRANDMA ON TRIAL

She sat primly, hands folded, on a bench behind the bar rail while her son confered at the bench with County Solicitor Willoughby Colby and Judge Stevens.

Judge Stevens asked her if she could hear well.

"Yes, sir," she replied in a clear, calm voice.

Because of her lameness and her age she was permitted to remain seated while the murder complaint was read.

This little lady, it is charged, "did maliciously and wilfully and with malice aforethought mix a quantity of cyanide of potassium with a quantity of food and drink with intent to poison and kill Alexander Stewart and did so poison and kill and murder him."

JAILED WITHOUT BAIL.

The reading of the complaint ended. Judge Stevens asked:

"What do you say, are you guilty or not guilty?"

She started to rise and court told her she need not stand.

"Thank you," she said. And then, without any trace of emotion: "I'm not guilty."

Court ordered her held without bail for trial in October, but informer her son he might apply to Chief Justice William H. Sawyer for admission to bail. Reynolds immediately did so, his plea was denied and his mother was remanded to Hillsborough County Jail in Manchester.

Court informed Reynolds that at the trial he would not be permitted to represent his mother alone, because he was not a resident of New Hampshire, but that he could procure a special waiver to aid in her defense. This he will do.

HER NOTABLE KIN

He said that George Lyman, prominent Boston attorney, is a first cousin of the accused woman. Another cousin is Theodora Willard, wealthy resident of Cambridge, he said.

Her daughter is Mrs. Mary L. Purcell of Waltham, herself the grandmother of four children.

While a schoolgirl in Sterling at the age of 16, Mrs. Reynolds eloped with Louis Reynolds, wealthy proprietor of Wright's Tavern in Concord, Mass. Her relatives frowned on the match.

Reynolds, who once owned the Oxford and Derby hotels and two wholesale liquor establishments in Boston, died poor in 1914.

TWO SONS RECONCILED

The life of his widow up to the present day is a human interest story of drama and tragedy spun along a thin thread of pride that would not break under the strain of poverty and adversity.

The charge resulted in the reconciliation of her two sons, Lyman, the Boston lawyer, and Louis, Cambridge business man, who had not spoken for 20 years. Lyman had believed his mother dead for four years until, three weeks ago, they were notified she was accused of murder.

She took the position and kept in communication with her two sons and daughter here, but always concealed her whereabouts.

PAIR SENT MONEY

Both sons sent her money. In 1928, however, she ceased to write. Lyman Reynolds went to New Hampshire in an attempt to trace her and was unsuccessful. No word ever again came from her directly and she was given up as dead until June 6, the day of Stewart's death, when she came to Boston, collapsed in the North Station and was taken to City Hospital where she revealed her identity and asked that Lyman be notified.

"I hadn't spoken to Louis for 20 years," said the man who will defend his mother against the murder charge. "We had a quarrel over some little thing and the breach widened. When I learned they were charging mother with murder I realized I needed Louis' help. He has money and he has wisdom. I didn't know what to do. Finally I telephoned him. Thank God he was big enough to forget our differences in this crisis.

"Mother used to tell us when we were children that blood was thicker than water. So it is."

The lawyer visited his mother last night and again this morning in the New Hampshire State Hospital where she has been under observation, voluntarily, and pronounced sane.

The grey-haired woman is bright eyed and possesses a keen intellect unimpaired by age. She realizes fully the awful significance of the position in which she finds herself.

"Lyman, I didn't do it, I didn't do it," she said over and over again.

DECLARES INNOCENCE

"I never killed him. He must have done it himself."

The lawyer asked her how she had been treated at the hospital.

"My son," she said simply, "this is the first time in a good many years that I've had enough to eat."

To the Boston Evening American she said:

"Through your paper you can say to my friends and family in Boston that I am absolutely innocent of this charge."

Woman, 71, Bares Beatings by Poisoned N. H. Man

Mrs. Cora Reynolds, 71, held without bail in the poisoning in New Hampshire of Alexander Stewart, 70, told the Boston Evening American the following story of her life with the man she is alleged to have slain:

"I injured my leg seven years ago when I was working in a Boston restaurant. I couldn't work any more and I wanted to get out in the country.

"One Sunday I read in a Boston paper an advertisement that Mr. Stewart had inserted. I went to Wilmont to keep house for him and at first he seemed to be all right.

"My children were sending me money and I was putting it away. One day he discovered a bankbook of mine and from that time on he was always making me use my money for food for the house.

"He kept forcing me to write my children for more money and finally I stopped writing to them at all and I naturally lost track of them.

BEAT HER OFTEN.

"A few months ago he was faced with a demand for a paymetn of a bill for $80. He told me I would have to write to my son in Cambridge to get it. I refused and kept refusing and every time I did he would knock me down, striking me and sometimes kicking me.

"Finally I did get $80 from my son and as soon as I got it he made me use it to pay the bill. We had frequent quarrels over that $80 and he beat me many times. On the Sunday before his death he knocked me down across the kitchen floro.

"I frequently told him I would leave him. He would, 'You don't dare to leave me. If you leave me they'll find my dead body here. I'll commit suicide.'

"A week before his death he told me he would kill himself and on Sunday he beat and told me he would kill himself.

BOUGHT RAT POISON

"For several days he was talking about buying arsenate of lead. He said he wanted to kill potato bugs. He complained to me about the cost of poison. He always wanted to get everything for nothing.

"Once I told him there was rat poison in the house. I bought it and signed for it in a Cambridge drug store 20 years ago and I used to kill the bat-eared rats with it up here.

"When I told him, he said that ought to be all right for the potatoes, but I told him I did not think it would, because it does not kill instantly. I had noticed the rats would eat it and run around looking for water.

"He said, 'Well, I guess I'll have to get arsenate of lead,' and the morning he left the house he said he would get the poison for the from some farmer along the road. bugs. He must have brought home cyanide of potassium. I never heard of it and have no idea where he got it and they tell me no one can be found who sold it to him. He must have got it

"VICTIM OF MALICE."

"I didn't cook any food or any coffee for him that day. He frequently cooked his own meals when I was sick and unable to do it.

"I am the victim of malicious gossip of a couple of neighbors who never had any use for me in Wilmot. I didn't try to sneak away from the farm. I said goodbyto several people. Do you think if I had killed him or planned to kill him that I would have allowed anyone to see me going away? I told the man who drove me to the station that I was going to Boston and that I was tired of his cruelty.

" never let my children know of the conditions under which I was obliged to live. I painted pictures exactly the opposite of the way things were. I made them think I was happy. I didn't want them to know. I have never asked for help. When I drifted away from the wealthy members of my family after my marriage I never went to them for help.'

100 PRIESTS AT FUNERAL OF FR. M'NAMARA

More than 100 priests attended the solemn high mass of requiem at the Church of the Holy Name, West Roxbury, today, for Rev. William P. McNamara, the pastor, and the throng of mourners was so large that the doors finally had to be closed.

Rt. Rev. Monsignor Richard J. Haberlin, vicar-general of the archdiocese, and Rt. Rev. Monsignor Ambrose F. Roche of St. Thomas' Church, Jamaica Plain, were present, and the priests' choir, led by Rev. J. Walter Lambert of Gate of Heaven Church, South Boston, sang.

Others in attendance were Mayor Curley, Fred Dillon, assistant secretary on the Governor's staff, representing Gov. Ely; Gaspar G. Bacon, president of the State Senate; Judge Daniel T. O'Connell of the Superior court; Judge Richard Walsh of Dorchester and Judge Franklin W. L. Miles of Roxbury; Police Supt. Michael H. Crowley, Street Commissioner Chairman Theodore A. Glynn, Sheriff John A. Keliher of Suffolk County, former Congressman Joseph H. O'Neill, E. Mark Sullivan, Walter L. Finnigan, Edward F. Condon and James P. Smith, former captain of the West Roxbury police division.

The various organizations connected with the church, the reprsentative delegations and public officials were led from the rectory by a police detail headed by Capt. John J. Hanrahan.

The celebrant was Rev. James F. Kelly, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Jamaica Plain, assisted by Rev. John J. Powers, pastor of St. Raphael's, West Medford, and Rev. William F. Lyons, pastor of St. Theresa's, West Roxbury. Fr. Powers pronounced the eulogy.

A children's mass preceded the solemn high mass, being celebrated by Rev. Joseph A. Quigley, a curate

JAPAN REFUSES ARMS CUT PLAN

Geneva, June 25 (INS)—Japan's technical experts at the Geneva disarmament conference turned thumbs down today on President Hoover's proposal for a one-third slash in all classes of military weapons.

In a report turned in by Japanese experts who have been studying the plan, the delegation declared itself "generally unfavorable" toward the proposal.

The delegation declared the proposed army reductions would leave Japan with insufficient national defense and that the reduction of capital ships is unacceptable, although Japan agrees to a compromise reduction of maximum tonnage from 35,000 to 25,000 tons.

President Hoover's proposal for a one-third cut in armaments will be considered "in the most serious spirit," Premier Herriot declared today.

"Anything that comes from President Hoover has a claim to thorough consideration," the premier said. "I have read and reread this message of his and I will read it many times again.

Shots at Windows Cost Boy Air Rifle

"Pop, pop," went an air rifle which a proud Quincy daddy had just given his 14-year-old son, and two windows in the Quincy Point fire station were punctured.

Police Lieut. Jeremiah Hinchon found the boy and took the rifle and Chief Bishop issued a warning to all parents to keep air guns and other weapons from their children.

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Longing for a Change? ↑ Many Thrills for You.
Drink With a "Kick"? Not for Rickenbacker.
Try Rockingham Punch. ↓ Dizzy Dervish Dance.

Father Time Flees Ahead, Grim Reaper Behind

With old Father Time and his hour glass fleeing ahead and the Grim Reaper with his scythe hovering on the flanks, a huge flock of racing automobiles with the greatest pilots in the country at the wheels, will shoot like skyrockets up the stretches and swoop like striking hawks round the turns of the Rockingham Speedway tomorrow. Glory be, that should be a sight for sore eyes! Even with the Braves up there clawing on the flanks of the league leading Cubs baseball palls on you now and then. We're sicker of this Sharkey-Schmeling controversy than Henri was after Mimi had fed him pate de fois gras every night for a week. We're looking for a change. Want something with a new pep and a real kick in it. That dizzy dervish dance of the death defying drivers seems to be just the concoction we're thirsting for. After a "shot" of that Rockingham punch we're liable to be a new woman, Agnes.

Taking it by and large, up and down and crossways, is there any thrill in sport equal to that of seeing and hearing a racing auto roaring down the stretch at a speed that would make the Twentieth Century Express look like a slow freight? Your heart beats a tattoo on the roof of your mouth as they circle the curves like a scared comet. Always that possibility—even probability—of accident, death. We've seen half a dozen auto drivers suddenly hurled to their Maker. The sight of one of them aflame with burning gasoline never will leave our eyes.

Yes, to most of us a big auto race furnishes us the thrills of a lifetime. But how dull, how drab, tomorrow's race, exciting as it may be, must seem to one certain, quiet-eyed official you will see at Rockingham. His name is Eddie Rickenbacker.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker now. It was plain "Eddie," back in the days when he was one of the country's greatest dirt track drivers. You remember him back in 1913 when he captained the Mason team that won 31 firsts, 17 seconds and 11 thirds in 71 starts on the speedways of the country. When the Big War broke out Eddie went Over There as chauffeur to Gen. Pershing. Was transferred to the air service and became Uncle Sam's Ace of Aces. Returned home with the record of having shot down 26 German planes. Those 26 planes were officially recorded. How many more Captain Rickenbacker brought down unofficially even Eddie himself doesn't know. In the fog of battle many things escape your sight—fortunately.

"Just then a series of zipping streams of fire flashed by my face and through my fusilage and wings . . . Enemy machines were piquing on me from above. They had seen me come over and undoubtedly had been stalking me for many minutes without my knowing it . . . I almost automatically zoomed up and did a chandelle to escape the tracer bullets directed at me . . . Two red-nosed Fokkers my old friends of the Von Richthofen Circus, sped down and passed me. But even before I had a chance to congratulate myself on my apparent outmaneuvering of them I discovered only half of them had passed me. Two more Fokkers spat a leaden rain on me from above.". . .

Just a paragraph from Rickenbacker's own story of his adventures Over There. Another Fokker zoomed down from a bank of clouds. Five against one! Five Fokkers of Germany's dreaded Von Richthofen Circus against the lone American Rickenbacker in his Spad!

And so, no matter how the thousands of us are thrilled at Rockingham tomorrow afternoon, can you blame Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker for not getting excited. No matter what happens at Rockingham it shouldn't be enough to make Eddie bat an eyelash. Capt. Rickenbacker, you know, is chairman of the Contest Board of American Automobile Association. He and his board members, P. E. Allen and Harry Stoddard, will be in supreme authority at Rockingham tomorrow. It's all in a day's work for Eddie.

Another old bird among the Rockingham officials who shouldn't get excited is Barney Oldfield. Old Barney was the first and greatest of the American record wreckers. There were days when Oldfield's name was on the tongue of every auto racing fan, just as the name of Freddie Frame, the Indianapolis winner, is on every tongue new. Old Barney, with the inevitable cigar stuck in his face, will be at the wheel of the honorary starter and pacemakr's car, tomorrow. Compare the times made when Oldfield was wrecking the records with those of the figure-fracturing Freddie Frame of today. Times do move, Pardner—they sure do move!

SPEED KINGS OLD AND NEW.
1906
1932

The Rockingham Sweepstakes should be the Indianapolis Classic all over again—and then some! Besides the Indianapolis winner and record breaker, Freddie Frame, most of the drivers who chased Freddie across the finish line, including Howdy Wilcox, 2nd; Bob Carey, 4th; Russ Snowberger, 5th; Ira Hall, 7th, and Billy Winn, 9th, will be out to turn the tables on him.

Throw in a flock of nationally-known drivers from all over the land and the cream of the New England stars and you have the greatest assembly of auto pilots that ever gathered on a New England course, and one of the greatest ever brought together in the world. Besides the Fifty-Mile Rockingham Sweepstakes, the big feature race of the meet there will be three ten-mile elimination and one ten-mile consolation heats. The time trials start at 12:30 o'clock. The Rockingham Sweepstakes will be raced late in the afternoon. Let's hop in the old Lizzie and head for Rockingham. An afternoon of thrills and spills should go good for a change.

SIDNEY WOOD BEATS MANGIN

Wimbledon, June 25 (AP)—Sidney B. Wood, Jr., defending Wimbledon tennis champion, today defeated his fellow American, Gregory Mangin, 6—1, 9—7, 6—3, to advance to the quarter final round of the current title play. Wood won the title last year by default from Frank Shields, United States Davis Cup player.

Wilmer Allison, another of the American players and a finalist against William T. Tilden in 1930, was defeated in the fourth round by Frederick Perry, English cup ace, 6—4, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2. Perry put out Allison's doubles partner, John Van Ryn, in the previous round.

MARJORIE SACHS WINS TITLE

Miss Marjorie Sachs, of Cambridge, a senior at Simmons College, won the invitation collegiate tennis title for girls at the Longwood Cricket Club, this morning, defeating Miss Charlotte Miller of New York University, who was top-seeded, by the score of 7—9, 6—1, 6—1.

Miss Sachs has been a finalist for three years, but never won the coveted title until this morning. Miss Miller took the first set after a hard struggle; but Miss Sachs came back and took the next two with little difficulty.

John Kelley First in Manchester Run

Manchester, N. H., June 25—John Kelley, No. Medford Club, won in the 10-mile run of the Downtowners' Club as the feature of the outing here today.

Kelley's time was 54 minutes 45 seconds, 48 seconds faster than his nearest rival, Honore St. Jean of this city.

The course was laid through the principal streets of the city.

8 Players Battle for U.S. Open Golf Crown

Fresh Meadow Country Club, N. Y., June 25 (AP)—Phil Perkins, former British amateur champion, now a pro, missed a five-foot putt on the home hole, wound up a 74 for his third round to move in front with a total of 219 for 54 holes in the U. S. open golf championship here today.

Olin Dutra recovered sufficiently from a weird 8 on the 15th hole, his only bad hole on the round, to finish with 75 and post a 54-hole total of 221, two behind Perkins.

Jose Jurado, Argentine contender, finished his third round in 75 strokes today and posted a total of 220 for 54 holes.

Walter Hagen blew himself right out of the running by staggering home with a 79 for his third round and a total of 227. "The Haig" was all over the course.

Gene Sarazen, British open champion, rallied sensationally, negotiated the last nine in 32, three under par, for a third round of 70, even par, and a 54 hole total of 220. This put him in a deadlock with Jurado and Diegel, only one stroke back of Perkins.

As the fourth round started between light showers, the championship scramble found no less than eight players bunched within four strokes of each other and the race wide open.

T. Phillip Perkins 219
Gene Sarazen 220
Jose Jurado 220
Leo Diegel 220
Olin Dutra 221
Bobby Cruickshank 221
Wiffy Cox 223
Harry Cooper 223

Cruickshank, a runner-up to Bob Jones nine years ago, equalled the tournament low score with a spectacular 32-37-69 for his third round and shot himself up among the leaders forthwith.

Cruickshank's outgoing 92 and Sarazen's 32 for the incoming nine were records for the course.

Fred Morrison, California, and Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., also shot 69's, but their totals of 226 and 225 respectively left them on the outer edge.

U. S. Open May Run 4 Days Next Year

Fresh Meadow Country Club, Flushing, N. Y., June 25—A proposal to extend the open golf championship from its present three-day schedule to a four-day tournament, with 18 holes each day, has been taken under consideration by the United States Golf Association.

Under the existing plan, 18 holes are played on each of the first two days, with 36 holes on the third day for the low 60 and ties.

Players have expressed a preference for the four-day plan and H. H. Ramsay, president of the U. S. G. A., indicated it would be considered before arrangements are completed for the 1933 championship at the North Shore Golf Club, Chicago.

Maples Want Game

The Maple A. C. of South Boston want a game for tomorrow afternoon away from home. Communicate with Ray Coolidge, South Boston 0070-R between 6 and 7 evenings.

BRAVES' CLAIM DISALLOWED

New York, June 25 (AP)—President John Heydler of the National League today disallowed a protest filed by the Boston Braves on a game with Brooklyn, June 2, which Brooklyn won, 6 to 1.

The protest was based on a decision of the umpires allowing George Kelly to score from first base on an overthrow of the bag by Fritz Knothe, Braves' third baseman. The Braves contended Kelly was entitled to only two bases.

Heydler upheld the contention of Boston that Kelly was given one more base than is allowed under the rules, but held that as Brooklyn subsequently scored five more runs the game was decided on its merits and the protest disallowed.

In making his ruling Heydler pointed out that the section covering the disputed play clearly stipulates that the runner is entitled to only two bases from the position he held when the ball was "pitched." President Heydler said the rule was so phrased to eliminate any guesswork as to the position of the runner when the wild throw was made.

Under the old rule the umpires had to decide the positions of all runners at the exact moment the play was made. Thus, if Kelly had rounded second when Knothe threw to first, as the Brooklyns contended, he would be entitled to score under the old rule, but not under the new.

Giants Play Twin Bill With Roslindale

The Boston Colored Giants will play a double-header with the fast Roslindale nine at Lincoln park tomorrow afternoon in what should be the best attraction offered South End fans since the season opened.

Manager Elbert Norman of the Giants has just signed Vince Johnson of the Mohawk Giants, William Beache of the Bachrach Giants and Tex Taylor of Darby, Pa., in an effort to strengthen his team and all three will start in today's double-header.

Taunton Puncher to Battle Zachrow

Nap Proulx, hard-hitting Taunton boxer, and Ad Zachrow of Dover, N. H., will be on the card at "Eddie Mack Night" at the Argonne A. A.'s show at Fenway Park on next [illegible] night.

[illegible] the most promising [illegible] to come to the front in several years. He's a particularly good right-hand puncher.

HURST LEADING BATTER IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

JIMMY FOXX SETS PACE IN A. LOOP

New York, June 25 (AP)—A new batting leader, Don Hurst of the Phillies, took command of the National League during the week, ending yesterday, but Jimmie Foxx of the Athletics continued to set the pace in the American League.

While Hurst was tacking 10 points onto his average of last week to take the lead over Paul Waner of the Pirates with .375, Foxx boosted his batting percentage to .382 for a comfortable advantage over Gerald Walker of the Tigers. Waner ended the week in a batting slump hitting .369. Walker had the same average, an increase of five points over his last week's mark.

Chuck Klein, Hurst's teammate, who boosted his batting average nearly 20 points to .362, continued to dominate the play in the National League as Foxx maintained his leadership in five departments in the junior circuit. Klein's rise in batting placed him fourth in his circuit, three points behind Ernest Lombardi, Cincinnati catcher.

Klein First to Reach Hundred-Hit Mark

Klein became the first major league player of the year to reach the century mark in total hits when he pounded out four safeties yesterday to increase his total to 103, eight more than Foxx.

The Phillies' outfielder also holds the advantage in runs scored, 78 to 66, but Foxx leads in runs batted in, 80 to 71, and in home runs 28 to 21. In addition Klein is tied with Babe Herman of the Reds for the National League leadership in triples with 11—a department of play in which Foxx does not figure seriously.

Although failing to get a double during the week, Paul Waner of the Pirates maintained his advantage over Porter of the Indians and Campbell of the Browns. The elder Waner has connected with 31 two-baggers, as compared with 29 each by Porter and Averill.

Ruth Trails Foxx in Home Run Race

In triples Buddy Myer, Washington third baseman, has hit 10, one less than Klein and Herman in the senior league. Stolen base honors, however, remained with the American League, Ben Chapman of the Yanks being credited with 12 thefts, as compared to 11 for Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals.

Babe Ruth failed to keep pace with Foxx in the race for home run honors in the American League. One home run during the week was the best the Babe could do, while Foxx hit three. As the result Foxx now leads Ruth 28 to 22.

Following Hurst, Waner, Lombardi and Klein, the leading batsmen in the National League are: O'Doul, Dodgers, .344; Herman, Reds, .337; Stephenson, Cubs, .332; Ott, Giants, and Whitney, Phillies, .326, and Critz, Giants, .322.

The American League's ranking batsmen, after Foxx and Walker, are: Dickey, Yankees, .339; Averill, Indians, .335; Gehrig, Yankees, .335; Levey, Browns, .332; Lazzeri, Yankees, .332; Combs, Yankees, .330; Porter, Indians, .321, and F. Schulte, Browns, .316.

WANDERERS, EVERETT TILT

A fine assortment of cricket games is on the card today with the feature clash at Glendale Park, Everett, where the league leading Wanderers will face Everett in a Mass. State League game.

Brockton and Standards will furnish a lively tilt at Smith Field, North Brighton.

Other games listed will have Athletics and Mystic Lodge at Linden, Arlington Mills at Rockland, West India A and West India B at Franklin Field, and University and Windsors at Franklin Field.

Zelinsky-Mignault Top Brockton Card

Promoter Jack Murphy of the Highland A. A. of Brockton will stage his next show on next Thursday night at Highland Stadium, Avon.

Bud Mignault, Bridgewater and Joe Zelinsky, Winthrop will clash in the feature 10 round bout, while Charlie Settino, Dorchester, will clash with Dick Lopez, Watertown six rounds. There will be three other six rounders on the card.

Cambridge Host to Allston Nine

Bouts Last Night

At Cleveland—Johnny Risko, Ohio, d. Mickey Walker, N. Y., dec. Paul Pirrone, Ohio, d. Gary Leach, Ind., K. O. (10).

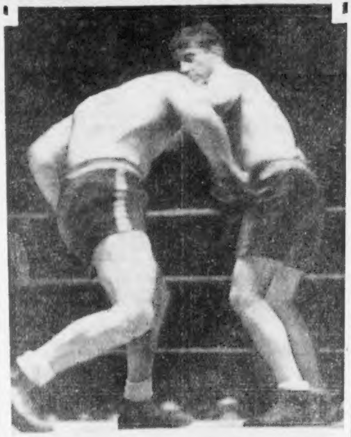
SCULPTORS' MODEL SCHAAF CHIPPED

Here is Stanley Poreda, whose friends argue has a good chance to become heavyweight champion. They say Schaaf ranks second to Sharkey, and when Stanley beat Schaaf he must be next to the champion. Impartial observers think Poreda has a long way to go, but admit that he's pretty good.



Ernie Schaaf, who poses for artists and sculptors and artists in moments outside the ring, had his reputation and features slightly dented by Stanley Poreda, Jersey City heavyweight, in their ten-round bout in New York last night. Poreda was given the decision over the blond Bostonian protege of Jack Sharkey in a blistering battle. Poreda is shown shooting a hard left hook to Schaaf's head in the ninth round. (Int. News Photos.)

Poreda Edges Schaaf; Risko Beats Walker

New York, June 25 (INS)—Stanley Poreda, young New Jersey heavyweight, today topped the list of boxers who may meet Max Schmeling, former champion, here this fall.

Poreda took whatever there was of body wopping from Schaaf and came through with fists flying for Ernie's classic head, almost as fresh as when he started.

Schaaf fought his usual plodding battle, but in the main was outspeeded by Poreda, who turned in the best fight of his career. He elected to outpunch and outstep Schaaf and succeeded. It was close, at that, with Schaaf coming fiendishly in the last three rounds.

Ten thousand persons saw the bout, the gate going to $14,000.

Risko Clubs Out Win Over Walker

Risko, dubbed by the late Tex Rickard as "The Spoiler" of the heavyweight class, sent Mickey Walker, giant killer of the big fellows, tumbling from the position he held as possible contender for Jack Sharkey's new crown here last night.

Fighting his first fight in more than six months, Risko won the unanimous decision of two judges and the referee over Walker at the end of 12 vicious rounds before 15,000 fans.

It was their third meeting and the first bout Risko won.

The long layoff, occasioned by torn ligaments in one of his legs, apparently did Risko a world of good, because the Clevelander never turned in a more brilliant effort.

Risko won the early rounds. Walker came on during the middle of the bout to practically even the standing; then the lead see-sawed back and forth until Risko, head down and both hands flailing away like pistons, won the final session to cinch the verdict.

BAUSCH PICKED IN DECATHLON

Evanston, Ill., June 25 (INS)—Whita Wilson Charles, Jr., brawny Indian, early today led the field of ten remaining contestants in the American Olympic decathlon finals here. Jim Bausch still was favored to win when the contest closes later in the day.

Charles' lead was based on his showing in the first five events of the trial. Bausch, former University of Kansas football star, however, had another event in which he excels, the discus throw, scheduled for this morning, and he may amass enough points to clinch the crown.

The Oneida Indian, who is now Mexico, took the lead by winning the 100-meter dash and the broad jump, tying for first in the high jump, taking second in the 400 meters and placing fifth in the shot put. His total was 4032-5625 points.

YALE CREW IS BEATEN BY HARVARD

New London, Ct., June 25 (US)—A slim, white-togged youth, arms upraised in exultation, shouted the name of Harvard high into the heavens as a symbol of a great crew victory.

There he was, Henry H. Bissell, '33, standing in the stern of the Harvard shell, megaphone in one hand, cheering his team-mates, while eight Yale varsity oarsmen at his back were still tugging at their oars in an effort to bring their boat over the finish line that Harvard already had crossed.

Harvard reached a moment of greatness then, for it left a great Yale crew three lengths behind in the four mile dash down the Thames river.

It was the second successive Harvard victory over its rowing rival for 80 years and, to all appearances, it put an end, a smashing end, to Yale domination in the noble pursuit of rowing.

Rowing a slower stroke than Yale all the way down the river, Harvard made the maximum use of its great brawn. The effort barely showed on the men after they finished. Only Benjamin Bacon, a giant of power all the way down the river, slumped over in the Harvard shell at the end.

Roger Hallowell in the No. 4 seat, spattered water on Bacon's back and soon he was sitting upright and joining Harvard in a complimentary cheer for Yale.

Harvard Trails at Start of Grind

Yale pulled away to the lead at the start, under the pace-setting of the sophomore, Johnny Jackson. Harvard, splashing frantically, fell a half-length behind. After three-quarters of a mile, it began to catch up and it held a beat of 30, 31 and 32 strokes to the minute down to the final half-mile.

After the race, Charles Whiteside, satisfied with the glorious climax to his third year as Harvard's coach, said:

"We rowed our best race of the year. The thing we have been striving for all year we found. We are all very happy. The squad will report Wednesday night and will begin preparation for the Olympic championships—that is, I mean, the Olympic tryouts."

Harvard went for its varsity race against Yale buoyed by confidence that came of a surprising victory by its junior varsity.

Yale's freshmen came through to triumph by four lengths and Harvard's junior varsity turned the tables by a length plus a dab of open water as the regatta got under way after a delay of almost two hours.

Diamond Dust

President Bob Quinn is in Washington today to see his Red Sox open a two-game series with the Senators. It is expected that the Fenway "prexy" will officially appoint Marty McManus manager of the club for the remainder of the season after he has had a talk with the veteran infielder, who has been directing the club since Shono Collins stepped out.

Another bit of Sox news released today is to the effect that Howie Storie, young catcher from Pittsfield, has been sent to the Hazelton Club of the New York-Penn League and that Henry Patterson, rookie from St. Mary's College, has been recalled from that club to become the Sox third-string receiver. President Quinn made the shift in the belief that Storie will develop more rapidly working regularly in the minors than he would sitting on a big league bench.

Heinie Meine, Pittsburgh's crack right-hander, out-pitched Eppa Jeppa Rixey, Reds' veteran portsider, and the Bucs whipped the Howleymen, 4 to 3, to hang onto third place. A home run by Lloyd Waner provided the winners with their margin of victories.

Eastern or western opponents, they all look alike to the Phils. After making the best showing in the circuit in the recent intersectional warfare by taking 11 out of 17 games from the boys from the wide open spaces, the Quakers hammered the Giants into submission, 11 to 6, to remain in fourth place and knock the New Yorkers below the Dodgers into sixth.

The second Braves-Dodgers game was the most unusual seen at the Wigwam this season in several respects. The Braves made ten hits, including a double, yet failed to get a runner as far as third base and saw only two reach second. The Dodgers made five double plays, or only one less than the major league record for twin killings in a nine-inning contest. Not a base on balls was issued by the three pitchers who saw action.

Phils' Stars as Good as Old-Time Heroes

By JOE CASHMAN

Whenever a great star reaches the end of his baseball career, you and I feel certain we will never see his equal.

How wrong we always are.

Before one outstanding performer has been forgotten another is more than filling his shoes. A Cobb passes, a Ruth forges to the front. A Johnson goes, a Grove comes. A Hornsby fades, a Foxx blooms.

When Ty Cobb and Sam Crawford were in their prime with the Tigers they were deservedly rated as the most powerful two-man attack in the history of the game.

When Crawford turned in his uniform and broke up the combination, the fans agreed that never again would the game boast of such a powerful pair on one team.

Yet, long before Cobb finally quit, the White Sox came up with Happy Felsch and Joe Jackson and the feats of the Tigers were quickly forgotten.

Ruth-Gehrig Team Caught Fans' Fancy

The 1919 scandal drove the Pale Hose heroes into disgraceful oblivion, but not the records of Felsch and Jackson. Dad would always keep those fresh in his memory to tell his children about.

A few years later, though, he had forgotten all about the Chicagoans and was talking only of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, whose phenomenal slugging was making the best work of Crawford and Cobb and Jackson and Felsch look very ordinary in comparison.

We didn't believe it possible that the slugging of the Yankee home run twins could ever be surpassed, but while this pair was at its peak, Al Simmons and Jimmy Foxx of the A's were doing almost, if not as well with their sticks.

Had the pinnacle in slugging been reached? It seemed certain it had, and doubly certain when the slow ball was brought back to the game.

That was only a year ago, yet up at Braves Field tomorrow afternoon you may gaze upon two young men who can do about everything any of the luminaries we have mentioned ever could and a whole lot they couldn't do.

Klein and Hurst Wreck Pitchers' Records

Chuck Klein and Don Hurst, rightfielder and first baseman, respectively of the Phillies, who open a three-game series with our Braves on the morrow, are breaking as many rival managers' hearts and as many hostile pitchers' reputations as any two-man attack in the annals of the sport.

Klein is seven ahead of his nearest rival in the loop in making home runs with a total of 21. Hurst is doing very well, thank you, with ten.

Klein also is tied for the major league lead in triples with 11 and is second among the senior circuit basestealers with 10.

The Phils boast little else in the way of star material, but they are in the first division, only a game back of the Braves and three games back of the top, and the critics agree that with another good pitcher or two they could climb to the pennant on the mighty backs of Klein and Hurst.

Philly Pair May Give Club Pennant

And in case you're interested, your correspondent is far from being convinced that the Phils won't win without those pitchers. "Chuck" and Don are a great team in themselves.

Remember, though, when you're gazing upon the two, either during the double-header which is carded for tomorrow or during the single game of Tuesday, no matter what they do, it won't be many years before their marks are equalled.

Set a standard for an American boy and he'll grow up and better it. It was always thus and always will be.

JOE JACOBS DEFIES N.Y. RING BOARD

By SID MERCER

New York, June 25 (US)—Indefinite suspension of Joe Jacobs both as a manager and second by the New York State Athletic Commission added fresh fuel to the bitter controversy over the transfer of the heavyweight title from Max Schmeling to Jack Sharkey last Tuesday night.

The feud between Schmeling's manager and the state boxing authorities appeared to be dying down to a smouldering fire of recriminations when Jacobs ceased his public denunciations on Thursday, but it flared up again suddenly with a blaze of indignation when the commission's official retaliation was tossed on the embers.

BLASTS MULDOON

Apprised that his licenses to act as manager and second had been revoked, Jacobs opened up once more with his verbal batteries. He began by paying his compliments to William Muldoon, who, with Gen. John J. Phelan, published the ban on Jacobs after a board meeting early this afternoon in the state building.

Jacobs blasted:

"So Czar Nicholas has banished me again. Well, isn't that just too bad? I suppose I should put a lock on my lips and not say anything. Why don't they bar the newspaper men who have assailed them? They have just as much authority to bar them from fight clubs as they have to take my license. But, no. They can't muzzle the press but they can center reprisal on Joe Jacobs—the guy next to Schmeling who is entitled to a beef. I must keep still and take it. Well, I'm not going to keep still."

Whatever may be said of Jacobs he has never been backward about fighting for what he considers his rights.

"Max Schmeling will never box in the State of New York unless Joe Jacobs is free to act as his manager and as a second in his corner. You can put that in your pipe and smoke it. Do you think I am going to sit by idly when everybody else is squawking? Me, of all people? I should say not.

"Schmeling has come out of this mess a more popular figure than he ever was before. There are plenty of other places where he can fight. He is a champion without a crown, and as long as he is kept out of New York he makes a joke out of boxing in this state."

Joe was told:

"But Schmeling hasn't been suspended. Indeed, he has been highly complimented by the commissioners for his sportsmanlike attitude."

Jacobs replied:

"They might just as well have suspended Max, too, for he stands squarely behind me, always has and always will. He knows my troubles are due to my efforts to protect him. He knows I protected him two years ago when he might have been declared a loser in the first Sharkey fight."

Told that Referee Gunboat Smith had voluntarily appeared before the commission seeking a vindication that he was told he did not need, Jacobs snapped:

"The fine hand of Jimmy Johnston was behind that, I suppose. He probably steamed Smith to go down there and start something."

Jacobs said that Schmeling had engaged passage on the S. S. Columbus of the North German line for Bremerhaven tomorrow night.

He added:

"He'll go to Berlin and he'll stay there until I tell him what to do. If this suspension is not lifted he will not consider New York as a battleground next fall for any of the bouts he has been offered."

MAX HAS FINE COMEBACK CHANCE

By DAMON RUNYON

New York, June 25 (US) — Max Schmeling has the best chance of a complete comeback of any man in modern pugilistic history who won and lost the heavyweight championship.

By modern pugilistic history I mean the period of the Queensberry game. I would say that Schmeling is a fair bet to be the first man to regain the title after losing it.

He is only 26 years old. He is in good health, and in full possession of all his faculties. Where he is still a comer as champion, most of the other titleholders since the days of John L. Sullivan, were all washed up when they lost the crown.

Sullivan was the first "hollow shell." His conqueror, James J. Corbett, made a second tery [illegible] but for the championship after losing it to Bob Fitzsimmons against James J. Jeffries. For 23 rounds Corbett gave Jeffries a boxing lesson only to fall by the wayside in the 23d round.

Battlers Lost Out When Past Their Peaks

In that fight Corbett was [illegible] low [illegible] he was pretty [illegible] when he tried [illegible] files and was [illegible] out.

Jeffries was away past [illegible] fighting zenith when he came out of a long retirement to meet defeat at the hands of Jack Arthur Johnson. John on [illegible] self [illegible] the [illegible] used to be [illegible] Jess Willard tipped him over. Willard was a [illegible] [illegible] when [illegible] Dempsey smacked him around at Toledo.

After [illegible] Tunney the [illegible] time Tunney [illegible] by knocking out Jack Sharkey [illegible] new heavyweight champion [illegible] [illegible] Dempsey [illegible] that [illegible] took up an exhibition tour a year ago.

Maxie's Career Just Beginning

Neither Sharkey [illegible] Schmeling held the championship when they met in 1930 though the title was at stake. It was a sort of an election to fill the vacancy created by Tunney's resignation.

Schmeling won on a foul when [illegible] Young Stribling [illegible] knocking him out in the final round.

I have said that Schmeling was [illegible] a [illegible] champion. By that I mean that he was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in his fight with Stribling he showed great improvement over the battle he had put up in [illegible].

And in his fight with Sharkey he displayed further improvement in some respects even while losing the verdict.

The Daily Dozen

—By Myles T. McSweeney—

The revolution which broke out in Siam is reported [illegible] the Sharkey-Schmeling controversy.

The king, loyal to royalty, insisted Schmeling was robbed. The people figured that Sharkey had the edge.

The king has [illegible] the people be [illegible] with the [illegible] of the movies of the fight.

Then fighting is expected to begin in earnest.

But by the time the movies get to Siam the king hopes the people will forget what the controversy was all about.

The Democrats are making desperate efforts to stop all talk about the decision as they hold their own quadrennial championship battle next week.

Big Innings Contest Popular With Fans

[illegible] have flooded [illegible] this new [illegible] [illegible] bit [illegible].

[illegible] first [illegible] week of the BIG INNINGS [illegible] If you [illegible] new [illegible] blank will be printed next Wednesday. This [illegible] Friday for the following week which begins a week from today.

[illegible] on Monday complete score [illegible] innings of [illegible] be printed together with the [illegible] in which the highest number of runs was scored. Watch for Monday's paper. YOU may have picked the right inning.

GAME IS SIMPLE

The "big innings" game is simple. It is just this:

Estimate the inning each day for six days, Sundays excluded, beginning the Saturday and ending the following Friday, in which the most runs are made by all the teams in the National and American Leagues, added together. Send in your guesses before Friday midnight of each week. And the lucky ones win the money. Not the runs on any one team but the largest total runs in the same one inning in the two leagues.

Here's how the contest will be decided. As an example the reader sends in the following guess:

Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.
3	1	4	6	5	9

The prizes will be awarded as follows:

Correct estimate for six days $100.

Correct estimate for first five days $50.

Correct estimate for first four days $10.

Correct estimate for last five days $50.

Correct estimate for last four days $10.

In the event [illegible] highest number of runs [illegible] be made in two innings of [illegible] [illegible] combination [illegible] will be carried [illegible] if there are more than one winner the [illegible] will be divided. Here are a few rules in entering the contest:

RULES OF THE CONTEST

The contest is limited to the first nine innings each day.

In the event of no [illegible] for all 16 teams of the National and American Leagues the high inning of the day previous will be repeated in the score.

Sunday games do not count. Neither will any game which does not go the legal distance (4½ innings, when home team is leading, 5 full innings if home team is behind).

It is not necessary to buy a copy of the Boston Evening American to enter or follow the contest. Estimates on each day's "big inning" may be sent in on any stationery but you must follow the form given. You may follow the contest by visiting the Boston Evening American office at 5 Winthrop sq., or the public library or any reading room and looking at each day's issue.

The "big innings" contest is open to everyone without consideration or obligation, excepting employes of the Boston Evening American.

Personalities of the Air

According to the CBS Funnyboners, it takes as much talent to listen as it does to perform.

Yep, and a lot more patience

Listening to the radio isn't always called a talent. Some say it's an ordeal. When are they going to attach dials to mothers-in-law?

The CBS Ziegfeld program says farewell after tomorrow night's broadcast. But wait and see if the feature doesn't return in the fall. . . . Morton Downey will soon be seen in a series of single shorts. . . . Eddie Cantor is Radio's most missed artist if one goes by Ward Wilson who says Eddie's is the voice most requested of him for imitation. . . . Fred Stone is the next to go the way of all stage folk—radio. . . . Freddie Rich has completed a jazz symphony called "Penthouse 34," a piece which takes 12 minutes to play. This summer Freddie plans to visit a Wyoming ranch to get inspiration for a new opus which [illegible] the Range. . . . CBS [illegible] voice [illegible] but try and distinguish the [illegible] in which [illegible] if permission can be obtained. Alice Joy and Everett Marshall, current RKO theater attractions, will be WEEI-ed at 1 tomorrow. . . . Don Howard has been said goodbye to by WNAC, his air spots will be filled by Allan Richards.

There's a lot of pain and labor that goes into the making of a radio performer, you've been told.

LETTERS LAUD FRANKFURTER CHOICE

Governor Ely is being [illegible] with telegrams and letters congratulating him on the appointment of Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard law school to the Supreme Court bench, it was revealed at the State House today.

The communications are coming from judges, public officials, lawyers and business men not only from Massachusetts but from other states.

Among those applauding the Governor's choice are Judge Lawrence J. Brooks of West Medford, Percy Jones of Cambridge, Chairman Milo R. Maltbie of the New York Public Service Commission, Julian W. Mack, United States circuit court judge; Judge Robert P. Patterson, United States district court of New York; Ellery Sedgwick of the Atlantic Monthly and Prof. Harrison L. Harley of Simmons College.

All of the letters testify to the high character and legal ability of Prof. Frankfurter and express admiration for Gov. Ely's courage in naming him.

"To anyone familiar with the rigorous training and exceptional quality of Prof. Frankfurter's mind, it is quite clear that the current discussion as to the degree of his liberalism is beside the point," Mr. Sedgwick wrote.

Judge Mack stated he had known Prof. Frankfurter [illegible] years and knew no one better fitted to serve Massachusetts and indeed the country in the high judicial post.

Financial News and Comment

STATE ST. Hears:

That traders are inclined to assume a neutral attitude. It is their idea that if stocks cannot be bought for a turn after such declines it is better to be idle than chasing the last few points on the down side. Then, again, the refusal of prices to have their usual snapback may signal a change in behavior and the expected sharp decline may not put in an appearance.

SPECTATOR Says:

Some liquidation and fear of more to come sent stocks back on their ears. They were near enough to the bear market lows to see the bull-bear battle lines forming. They were, of course, a lot of stories around to account for the sinking spell, but it was significant that they were not taken seriously in informed quarters.

Washington News

Of significance too, was the report around that there was some news brewing in Washington that might knock the lid off things, perhaps paralleling the bulge a year ago.

At any rate, important short covering, which has been going on for several days, is understood to be continuing.

One leading house that has been sour on the market for several months is said to have been covering American Can, Union Pacific and U. S. Steel in the last three days . . . Of course, everyone is bearish on Can now, just as they were all bullish on it early last year . . . It seems to be an accepted cinch that all one has to do to make money is to sell Can and then take your time about covering.

Predictions

Along with this are predictions [illegible] of prices on the downside. Yet it's curious that interests close to the company are more inclined to the buy than the sell side and Can in the past has proved itself a firebrand on the upside.

Weakness in Atchison, due to reports the dividend will be omitted next week was responsible for most of the selling in Union Pacific.

PRICE CHANGES ONLY NARROW IN WALL ST.

New York, June 25—Price changes at the close of trading on the New York Stock Exchange today were only narrow. The latest selling flurry in the share market halted with a fadeout ,rather than the customary rebound of more active times.

Trading again came close to a standstill, and net changes were negligible. The list eased a little in spots in the first hour, then recovered.

TURNOVER 300,000 SHARES

The turnover was around 300,000 shares, making it one of the dullest Saturday sessions in recent years. News of a character to affect the market was almost wholly lacking, and traders were content to mark time, pending next week's developments in Washington, Lausanne and Chicago.

The most encouraging aspect of the market was the halt to the rather brisk decline of the previous session, before price averages had violated the low levels of the bear market registered on June 1. On the whole, however, brokerage quarters found it difficult to draw conclusions from such a quiet session.

Auburn was virtually the only issue to close substantially lower. That stock sagged 5 point to 40¾, compared to last week's peak of 77⅛, but then recovered a couple of points.

American Can, which has been a weak feature this week, owing to uncertainty over next Tuesday's dividend action, sagged a point, then recovered.

Similar losses in American Telephone and American Tobacco B were regained. U. S. Steel and Santa Fe sagged fractionally to new lows, then recovered. U. S. Steel preferred closed up a fraction. At the finish the tone was steady and changes in leaders were almost entirely limited to negligible fractions.

VETO THREAT A FACTOR

Intimations from the White House that the relief measure might be vetoed, if it finally appeared in such form as to throw the budget far out of balance, met with a favorable response in banking quarters. The prolonged controversy on the subject, which now seems likely to keep Congress in session another week and prolong legislative uncertainties, was regretted.

While the outcropping of small bank suspensions in Chicago may have been contributory to yesterday's setback in the market, the situation was viewed calmly today.

Weekend business surveys reported that there had been some pickup in spots, but it was difficult to dtermine how much had been due to anticipation of the excise taxes, which took effect this week. Business generally was described as entering the dull between seasons period.

Commodities moved almost as narrowly as stock. Cotton closed unchanged to 10 cents a bale higher, and bar silver held at 26¾ cents an ounce, the low for 1932 reached yesterday, and one cent above the all-time low hit in 1931.

Some softening of the dollar in foreign exchange trading at the opening was soon overcome. The French franc, after opening 3-16 of a point higher against dollars, subsided to show a slight decline. Sterline was up a little ,but the Japanese yen fell back to its low.

Scovill Mfg. Co. Is Given Sales Rights

Scovill Manufacturing Co. of Waterbury, Ct., has secured the sales rights for the production of the Hookless Fastener Co. The business itself was not acquired, the announcement stated.

Dividends

Great Northern Railway took no action on semi-annual dividend on the preferred stock due at this time. On Feb. 1, last, a semi-annual payment of $1 was made and a year ago $1.50 was paid, prior to which the stock was on a $5 annual basis.

Southern California Edison Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common, payable Aug. 15 to stock of record July 20.

People's Gas Light & Coke Co. declared a dividend of $1.25, payable July 18 to stock of record July 5.

Executive committee of Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois has recommended that the next dividend declaration be 75 cents on the common stock.

Depression Is Nearing Its Close, Says Vance

New York, June 25 (U.S.)—After drawing up a balance sheet for American business, Ray Vance, economic statistician, concludes this period of depression is drawing to a close from natural causes and will probably show improvement before the end of the year without any legislative aids.

The time to impose effective control, Mr. Vance says, is before the damage resulting from an unbridled boom has been done. The late Paul M. Warburg expressed the same idea in saying that the way to cure a depression is to sit on the bulge.

FOUR PRELUDES ACCOMPLISHED

Mr. Vance, in "The Nation," asserts that four preludes to recovery have already been accomplished, namely:

"1. A liquidation of speculative positions in securities. With brokers' loans below 400,000,000 (a decrease of more than 95 per cent from the peak) we need worry no more about this factor.

"2. Current debts have been sharply decreased. Total bank loans were off over 25 per cent by the end of 1931 and reporting member banks indicate a further decline to 33 per cent by May 1, 1932. Debts on open book accounts and instalment purchases are reduced even more sharply.

"3. The supply of goods available for consumption has been sharply reduced.

"4. Wage rates and the general overhead of business concerns have been curtailed to a point where profits could be made on relatively small volume of business."

Mr. Vance points out, however, that three important things have not yet been accomplished, namely:

WHAT NOW REMAINS TO BE DONE

"1. An adjustment between long-term, or 'capital,' debts and general price levels. In the rush to do this with intergovernmental debts, we overlook its impossibility for privately owned bonds and mortgages without wholesale bankruptcies. This will be an overhanging cloud until some inflation, or 'reflation,' has intervened.

"2. With the exception of Great Britain no large nation has readjusted its budget to current conditions.

"3. Owners of hoarded capital must be convinced that they face an opportunity for profit in its use."

ORGAN ORDERS HAVE BIG GAIN

Aeolian-Skinner Organ Co. discloses that value of new contracts received during the first five months of the current year for installation of pipe organs in universities and churches was 78 per cent greater than during the previous five-month period.

The company under its present name was formed last Jan. 1 following a merger of pipe organ division of Aeolian Co* with Skinner Organ Co. Today's announcement, made by George L. Catlin, vice-president of Aeolian-Skinner, embraced figures for the constituent companies prior to the merger.

In April the company revealed that 10 per cent had been added to the number of employes in its main Boston factory.

Bankruptcy Act Is to Be Discussed

A meeting of business leaders representing all lines of industry is to be called shortly by the American Clothing and Furnishings Bureau to discuss the proposed amendments to the National Bankruptcy Act now pending before Congress.

Attorneys, credit men, those engaged in the collection of delinquent accounts, and others interested in the subject, will be invited to attend the meeting. Samuel Wieder, executive manager of the bureau, will preside. A debate is to be held, stressing the good and bad points of the proposed amendments.

U. S. Securities Corp. Organized

Formation of United States Securities Corp. with an approved and comprehensive list of railroad, public utilities and industrial bonds against which will be issued collateral trust 7 per cent income bonds, is announced by Wellington Bull & Co., Inc., and associates. The corporation's own bonds will be issued against collateral in the form of bonds purchased and deposited with a responsible trustee, and purchasers will receive full information at stated intervals regarding the deposited collateral.

Gary Railway Sold to Calumet Transit

Sale of the Gary Railways Co., a subsidiary of the Midland Utilities Co., to the Chicago & Calumet District Transit Co., of which Walter J. Cummings is president, was announced by William A. Sauer, executive vice-president of the Midland Utilities Co.

Alberta Borrows in London Market

Underwriting in London of £1,600,000 5 per cent registered stock of the Province of Alberta, maturing in 1967, is announced. This is the second recent borrowing by public issue in London by a Canadian province, and Alberta's first resort to that market for long-term financing since before the war. The loan was arranged by Dominion Securities Corporation, Wood Gundy & Co. and Imperial Bank of Canada.

New Director for Management Ass'n

John G. Goetz, for 12 years assistant to the president of the National Industrial Conference Board has been appointed managing director of the American Management Association, to succeed W. J. Donald.

Cheerful Signs for Business Are Cited

A number of developments have recently taken place which forecast a halt in the declining trend of business, says the United Business Service in its report issued today. The drain on the American gold supply is substantially over. The inflationary bonus bill has been defeated, and an economy bill has been passed. Forced liquidation of securities is drying up. Bank reopenings have been frequent in many parts of the country. Federal Reserve member banks have increased their loans on securities for the first time this year. The spread between the prices of finished goods and those of raw materials continues to lessen.

A survey of Washington opinions as to business made by the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, follows in part:

"Washington officials feel that the credit situation will be demonstrably better this summer, that the current few months probably mark the low of the depression, but that recovery will necessarily be slow and tedious.

"Points on which this moderate degree of short range optimism are based are these: Alleviation of uncertainties by adjournment of Congress. Failure of all outright inflation measures, including bonus. Approximate balancing of the budget. Continuing hopes for success of the Federal Reserve credit easing policy. Cessation of the outflow of gold. High hopes for good practical results from the banker-industrialist committees in various Reserve districts."

Modified Reorganization Is O. K.'d for Snider Packing

New York, June 25—A modified plan of reorganization for Snider Packing Corp. announced May 26 was declared operative in joint statement issued by Clifton M. Miller, chairman of the reorganization committee, George E. Warren, chairman of the noteholders' protective committee, for which J. Arthur Adler is counsel. Their statement followed approval by stockholders at the New York office of the company. While deposits of securities assure carrying out of the plan, all deposits must be completed by July 1 and it is likely the plan will be consummated shortly thereafter.

Present capitalization consists of $2,598,000 6 per cent gold notes, matured May 1, 1932, 60,000 shares of preferred and 138,310 shares of common. The new company will have a capitalization outstanding of approximately $1,600,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bonds in two series maturing May 1, 1937, and November 1, 1939, $1,030,000 10-year income 6 per cent debentures, due November 1, 1939, and 203,731 shares of capital stock.

Directors will be elected annually. Initial board will consist of the following; T. H. Blodgett, chairman; S. E. Comstock, president; B. C. Olney, executive vice-president; D. C. Townsend, Clifton M. Miller, of White-Weld & Co.; Carleton Bunce, vice-president of the Chase National Bank, and W. H. Jaquith, vice-president of the Marine Midland Trust Co. of New York.

Superpower Stock Is Changed

Boston Stock Exchange today was advised that stockholders of International Superpower Corporation voted to amend the charter of the corporation to this effect—that total amount of authorized capital stock of the corporation is 2,100,000 shares, of which 100,000 shares without par value are preferred stock and 2,000,000 shares of the par value of one dollar each on common stock.

For the common shares of this corporation of $10 par value now on the list there are now substituted the same number of common shares of a par value of $1 each. As of this date there are 215,919 common shares outstanding and no preferred shares.

Quincy Mining Has "Successor"

Secretary George A. Rich of the Boston Stock Exchange today announced:

"Inasmuch as Quincy Mining Company (old company) is to be succeeded by Quincy Mining Company (new company), the latter company having the same number of shares, of a par value of $25-$20 paid-in, and the old company is to be dissolved, the transfer books of the old company will be permanently closed at the close of business June 29 and no transfers of its capital stock will be recorded thereafter."

Franklin Mining Off List

Boston Stock Exchange has dropped from the list the capital stock of Franklin Mining Company and of South Lake Mining Company, the Boston transfer and registration agencies having been discontinued.

Stock Stamps Are In Boston

Secretary George A. Rich of the Boston Stock Exchange has been informed by the U. S. internal revenue office in Boston that there are now available stock transfer stamps in denominations of 5 cents, 25 cents and $4.

Dividend Changes Are Reviewed

New York, June 25 (AP)—There were 153 unfavorable dividend changes in the past week compared with 129 in the preceding week, according to the Standard Statistics Company. Favorable revisions numbered 14 against 11.

Curb Short Interest Reduced

New York, June 25 (AP)—The short interest in all securities on the New York Curb Exchange on June 15 was 33,626 shares compared with 41,790 shares on May 31.

DEMAND FOR FURNITURE UP

New York, June 25—Since the first of the year more interest has been evident in furniture and house furnishings than in nearly a decade.

While it is true that purchases have been confined largely to the cheaper grades of merchandise, more attention now is begin given to quality goods, the current issue of Dun's Review will say in its survey of the furniture industry.

Discrimination in buying never was so marked, and as purchases must be confined to one or two articles at a time, insistence on quality and long-wearing properties are making retailers alter their merchandising policies in consonance with a radically new selling condition.

Production of furniture in 1931 barely reached a value of $450,000,000, which was a drop of 22 per cent from the 1930 record and nearly 42 per cent below the peak figures of 1929.

'FRISCO AIDED IN LOAN QUEST

New York, Jan. 25 (AP)—To help smooth the way for the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway in obtaining a $1,290,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corp., the Railway Credit Corporation has agreed to release to the road $2,014,000 of its consolidated mortgage 4½ per cent bonds which were pledged for a loan of $2,805,175.

The released bonds together with $4,390,000 of new prior mortgage bonds will be pledged with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the new loan. As security for the $2,805,175 loan, the Railroad Credit Corp. will retain contributions made by the Frisco to the freight surcharge pool and a second lien on the bonds released.

Solvey Trust Lists Stock Investments

List of securities behind Solvey American Investment Corporation 15-year 5 per cent secured gold notes series A due 1942, submitted to New York Stock Exchange, includes the following:

SKYSCRAPER BY FAITH BALDWIN From Which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Has Made the Thrilling Cosmopolitan Photoplay SKYSCRAPER SOULS

Tom Uneasy at Dwight and Lynn

What Has Gone Before

Lynn Harding, young and pretty, is ambitious for a career in the Seacoast Bank and Trust Company. She loves Tom Shepard, secretary to one of the vice presidents, but will not marry him, feeling they both must make their careers first. Then Lynn meets David Dwight, a prominent lawyer, through Sarah Dennet, her chief at the bank. Dwight is attracted to Lynn and invites her and Sarah to his apartment for dinner. Lynn's room-mate, Jennie Le Grande, a model, warns her that Dwight is dangerous. Dwight meets Jennie and Tom at Dwight's party.

Now Read On—

LYNN couldn't remember half the names. Later, the theatrical crowd arrived, straight from the dressing rooms. And there was also Lillie James, the motion picture ingenue, who had shot into stardom and was now making a new picture on Long Island.

There was Mark Manners, the illustrator. There was George Fane, juvenile lead in "Let's Be Silly," and Maris Marr, Ziegfeld's loveliest, and Babe Leonard, who wrote stark tales of the submerged ten millions and lived on Park ave from the proceeds. There were dozens of others, all gay, all friendly.

There was dancing; singing, with obliging artists doing impromptu turns. There was Gwen Hammond singing her latest, most melancholy song, and "Brownie" Bird, star of "Mulatto Madness," singing her famous version of "St. Louis Blues." There was, very late, Sonny Carter and his gold-plated saxophone and one turn of hired talent, the three adagio dancers, who had held all Manhattan breathless recently. And, of course, an orchestra.

Things to eat, things to drink, things to smoke; couples out on the terrace, whispering, swinging idly in the great swings, leaning on the parapet in the sweet spring night; laughter and the ceaseless murmur of voices.

It was two o'clock and the party was well under way when Dwight gently but firmly detached Lynn from George Fane, with whom she was dancing; and after taking her twice about the room, stopped by the terrace doors and led her outside.

DREW DEEP BREATHS

"Sure you're warm enough? Shall I send for a wrap?" he asked.

"No, it's heavenly out here," she said, looking over the terrace wall, drawing in deep breaths of the night wind, the subtle fragrance of green growing things.

"Did I annoy you taking you away from Fane? I annoyed him; that was obvious."

"I hardly think so. He'll find another audience," she laughed. "He was telling me he couldn't get a break, the women stars were always so jealous!"

"He's a conceited ass but a good youngster," Dwight told her indifferently, "even if he does break all the feminine hearts across the footlights."

"He's not nearly so good-looking as Tom," Lynn said absently, and wondered where Tom was and if he were having a good time. She'd danced with him a little earlier. The orchestra was playing some old hits, by request, "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," Tom had sung, holding her close. "And that's no idle jest," he had added abruptly; "there won't be any penthouses for a long time, Lynn."

"As if I cared!"

"Idiot!" And she had looked up at him, gray eyes shining between the dusky lashes, lips curved in reproach.

TO GET SENTIMENTAL

"I want like the devil to kiss you," Tom had told her savagely and a sharp tremor of emotion troubled her pulses and sang in her veins and weakened her knees, very sweet, very disturbing. And she had swayed closer and murmured, her breath catching. "Don't look at me that way, Tom. I can't bear it."

A moment of pure desire, pure and perfect anguish, pure and ecstatic happiness . . . Then Fane had cut in.

But something of that pleasant troubles, something of that burden of languor and painful, frustrated delight remained with her now, as she stood on the terrace with Dwight beside her.

Inside, they were now playing one of Gwen's songs and she was singing to it, husky, sweet voice drifting over the brassy yearning of the saxophones:

"When my man's away, there ain't no peace,
I dunno what to do—
Can't sleep, can't walk, can't smile, can't talk,
Feelin' so dog-goned blue,
When my man's away, I just sit and pray,
God, bring him back to me
When my man's away, for a night, for a day,
There ain't no peace for me."

Trivial words and an important truth. The husky voice made magic of the dragging music; invested with the eternal glamour of human longing, the tinsel, tawdry lyric. Only the truth remained, heartbreaking.

STARED INTO DARKNESS

She said, in a dreaming voice, "It's—lovely. So real."

"Women feel that way I suppose, and, believe it or not, some men."

"Yes." Lynn clasped her hands on the wall in front of her and stared out into the darkness.

"It's a pity things have to be so complicated," Dwight said. "A pity that love's so wilful. Other women's men, other men's girls—we don't stop to think of that, do we?"

"I suppose not." She remembered Mara, and spoke of her. "A girl I know," she said, confident that he would understand.

When she had told the little there was to tell he said slowly, looking out to the velvet arch of the heavens:

"You can't do anything. Isn't she like most of us, caught in a trap of her own contrivance, struggling, hurting herself, trying to manufacture happiness, escape? She calls it 'having a good time.' I spoke to you the other night of the skyscrapers, didn't I?

"Sometimes I see them from another angle. Tremendous traps, opening and closing on time signals. I watch the girls and women come out of the doors, evenings, hurrying to their homes, happy or unhappy, but always preoccupied with the fear of losing their economic independence—if it is independence; leading such disseminated lives—the life of the skyscraper, ordered, patterned; the life of the home—whether it is an apartment or a furnished room; whether it contains the family unit of parents, fraternal relations, or husbands and children.

"Possibly your friend is disregarding the red light in order to make her life more bearable; possibly she is simply trying to bend one of the oldest forces in the world to her own small ends—in short, she accepts invitations from a man who may be able to guarantee her job to her. Yet perhaps she is only escaping. As for her husband, she probably loves him. But love, the strongest thing in the world, the poets say, is a delicate thing. It bruises with ease; it shatters at a touch.

LOVE MUST RISE

"Love in a walk-up," he laughed, "with lovers trying to budget love the way they budget finances, with little wives working, and coming home disheartened and tired with bills to think about and a run in the last pair of stockings; with grouchy husbands; with the smell of cabbage and laundry soap; with babies crying. Love nourished upon occasional routine embraces and stereotyped kisses. Love has to be stronger than I believe it is to rise above all that."

Lynn drew a deep breath. "I suppose you're right. I hate to think you're right. I won't believe it. Tom—Tom and I are different. We must be different. Waiting's hard," she said with unconscious cruelty, "when you're young and love each other. Sometimes I don't know what to think. We'd be crazy to marry—now. Perhaps we'd be crazy to marry even if I kept on working. Yet I can't give up my work.

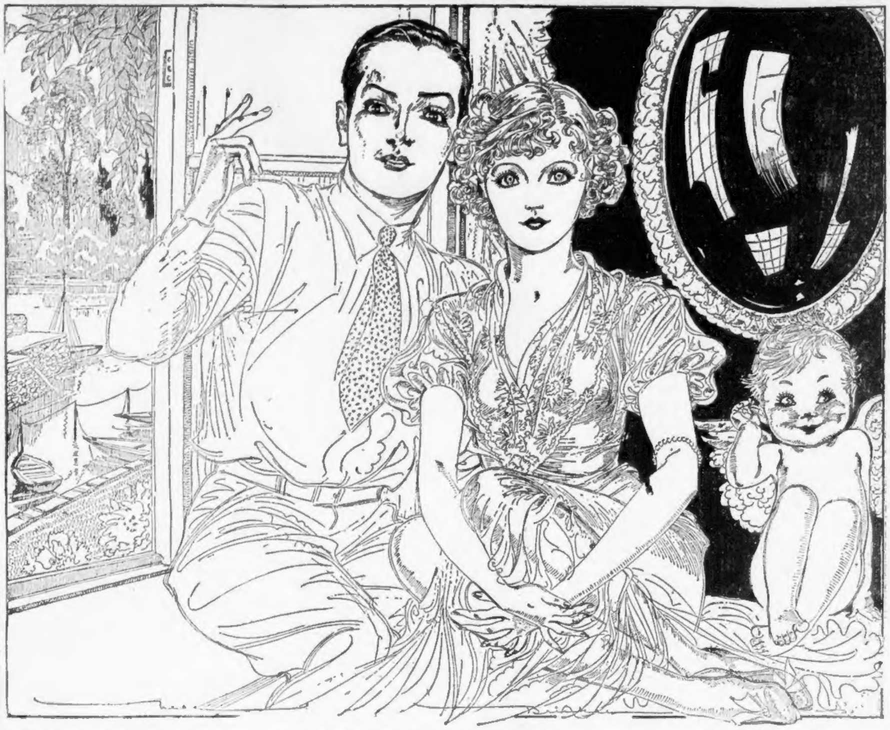
"THE SALESMAN" :-: :-: Drawn by Nell Brinkley



The minstrel of the days of the knight in steel and velvet was supposed to amuse the Princess—the lady of the castle. To sing her songs of love and legend that had nothing—save under the rose—to do with himself. To amuse. To worship—if he must—secretly. The young man today who romances to the young lady his glance has fallen and lingered upon, his heart is toasting for, and his head is in a coma for, does not pass on the song of love and legend and fancy for to amuse. He sells himself. He paints his tuneful picture for his own sake. And what a picture! Just as colorful, much more livable, sweeter in every way than ever the vision of love that was current in those intriguing but fearsome-for-a-lady knighthood days was.

Gloriette listens. She is impressed. Eros listens, and is impressed. Says Gloriette, "But we will have to live on bread-and-cheese-and-kisses! These are days of depression!" Says Eros, "By cookie, he's doing fine. I can see it myself!"

What do you think Gloriette answers to this ardent salesman, in the end? If she thinks his eyes the nicest in the world? His ties the best of all taste? His hands the most capable? He himself the most astonishing young man in the world? I think he was sold, he and his pictures of love for two, before he began.

Daily True Story

The Love Letter

TOM'S STEP was buoyant and he smiled indiscriminately at passersby, eager to share with all the world the joy of his sudden success. Crossing Washington sq. on the way to his rooming house, a little girl on a tricycle ran over his toes and knocked herself over.

He laughed so heartily that she forgot to cry as he picked her up and set her going again.

When he reached his room, Tom went directly to his draftsman's board where he worked nightly beside a basement window. A check, the reward of those hours of solitary work, was now in his pocket. With quick, easy calculations, he added the amount he had just received to the total of his bank account and was stunned at the result. The savings of two years appeared insignificant beside this miraculous windfall.

Laying before him an ample supply of paper, he proceeded without further delay to cover 12 pages with ardent declarations of his love—a love which was now liberated and free, at least, to beg love in return. First, of course, he told her the good news. His design for the Club House had been accepted. He had put his whole being into the job and he had won the prize. His future as an architect seemed assured. He asked only the joy of sharing it with Sheila.

MAILS LOVE LETTER

Last summer she must have wondered why he cut short his visit to his parents. It was simply because he did not trust himself to be near her any longer and retain a purely friendly relationship.

But surely she must have guessed how delighted he was to be with her those few days. Her instinct must have told her that he had loved her ever since they first met. The moment itself must have had a significance of some sort for her, when for him it was the dawn of everything and had the power to awaken his finest impulses and fire him with ambition and longing which she alone could consummate.

When he finished, he sealed the letter and, as a soul finally released from bondage, sped to the post office.

The next day a letter arrived from Cleveland. He recognized her writing, as they carried on a regular correspondence. Impossible that she could have received and answered his proposal so quickly! The first few lines proved that she had not. Suddenly his face grew pale and his knees felt weak. With startled eyes he read:

SHEILA'S ANSWER.

"Why don't you ever say anything sentimental to me, Tom? My sisters are always getting silly letters from men and all the girls I know have lots of fun comparing their love letters. I never have any to show. So do be a sport and tell me I'm your heart's desire. I shan't take you seriously."

In a daze, Tom made for the nearest phone booth. Agonized, he recalled things he had written. He certainly had not intended that they be read aloud to her sisters and friends, to have his sincerest emotions made the subject for ridicule! He had meant those sentiments for Sheila alone. He had not poured forth his whole aching, lonely soul for the amusement of a group of idiotic girls! With the face of a disillusioned cynic and a confirmed bachelor, he rang up long distance.

Sheila answered.

"Hello, this is Tom. Tom Crane. Did you get my letter, Miss Bennett?"

"Yes, Tom," Sheila answered in a timid, slightly amused voice.

"And have you and your sisters had a good laugh over it?" he asked bitterly.

There was a long pause and to his astonishment he heard something that sounded like a sob. Or was it a laugh? In his misery he decided that she was laughing at him, cruelly, mockingly. Yet, when she spoke, her voice was gentle and throaty. It sent a tingle down his spine.

"Oh Tom, how could you think I'd do such a terrible thing! Why, it's the most beautiful letter that was ever written. And it's mine! Nobody else in all the world will ever see it."

With the face of a lover, Tom pleaded impatiently, "Sheila, tell me quickly, what is your answer?"

"Well for suspecting me of base conduct, you'll have to wait for your answer." Then she added, a little breathlessly, "it's, it's just been mailed."

Comfy Clothes While Baby Sleeps

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

FOR THE FIRST few weeks of a baby's life the infant should sleep from 20 to 22 hours out of every 24. From the third to the sixth month 12 hours of sleep and a two-hour nap morning and afternoon should be the rule.

Dr. Copeland

If a baby cries at night any time during the first three months it probably is suffering from indigestion or from colic. These digestive disorders may be due to several causes. Among these are:

2—Overfeeding.
3—Incorrect formula.
4—The mother's milk may be unsuited or insufficient.

Irregular feeding is harmful. A baby overfed in the daytime probably will cry all night. There should be regularity in the feeding, and the infant should be awakened for this purpose at regular intervals of three or four hours during the day.

If the baby wakens during the night, one night feeding is permissible up to the age of six months. Permitting a baby to sleep on its mother's breast and to nurse most of the night is harmful both to the child and the mother.

When a child cries it is not always a signal for food, and it is a bad habit to let a child nurse every time it cries.

A baby should be nursed not less than 15 minutes nor more than 20 minutes, and at regular times. If it is not breast-fed, the formula should be prescribed by a physician, and any changes in diet should be under his supervision.

Tasty Bits for Guests

You Should Have Plenty in Pantry

By MARTHA LEE

THIS IS the season of unexpected company, and while it's a joy to have Cousin Edna and the girls drop off from East Orange, en route to Cape Elizabeth, and to welcome a college chum from Oshkosh, the fact remains that along with our welcome, our thoughts make a bee line to the icechest and we wonder, a bit resentfully, why in these days of easy telephoning, guests must arrive unheralded and unsung.

It's all very nice to talk about the emergency shelf, but all-too-easy to call on it frequently and then forget to replenish it until the fatal day when the dear in-laws arrive, and there just is nothing but thin air in the place where the canned chicken and vacuum-packed ham once parked.

One rule I do always try to keep, however, and that is, two cans of crabmeat tucked away behind the spices where pantry marauders will not be apt to find them. Then I know that, come what may, I can scramble something together that will save my reputation for preparedness.

If it's the luncheon or Sunday supper guests, crabmeat, corn and peppers can be combined quickly and deliciously thusly:

CRABMEAT, CORN AND PEPPERS

1 can crabmeat
2 tbsps. butter
1 onion, chopped
2 green peppers, chopped
1 can corn
1 cup cream
1 tsp. salt
Cayenne pepper, few grains
1 egg yolk
Toast or crackers.

Cook chopped onion, peppers, in butter until soft. Add can of corn, cream, salt and cayenne pepper. When mixture is hot, add crabmeat, boned and flaked, then beaten egg yolk. Cook until thick. Serve on toast or crackers.

SUNDAY SUPPER'S OLD RELIABLE

2 cans crabmeat
3 c. thick white sauce
½ lb. grated American cheese
1 tsp. celery salt
1 small can sliced mushrooms
Salt and pepper
1 uncooked pie crust
Cracker crumbs
Butter
1 medium-sized green pepper

Make white sauce in double boiler. Blend grated cheese into sauce, stirring until smooth. Add celery salt and chopped green pepper. Then add the flaked crabmeat and sliced mushrooms. Season to taste. Cool. Pour this mixture into a deep baking dish, which has been lined with the uncooked pie crust made of plain paste. Cover top with cracker crumbs and dot lightly with butter. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 deg. F.) until brown. Serve hot. May be made in small individual pies. Serves six.

CRABMEAT NEPTUNE

2 cans crabmeat
5 tbsps. butter
1-3 c. flour
3 eggs
1 c. milk
1 c. bread crumbs
1 c. cooked peas
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper

Boil two eggs until hard, peel. Make thick white sauce, cooking together three tablespoons butter, flour, milk and seasonings, stirring constantly until thick. Mix boned and flaked crabmeat with one egg beaten slightly, bread crumbs and the white sauce. Let mixture cool. Shape into oval roll, placing the two hard-boiled, shelled eggs in the center of the roll, so that they are entirely invisible. Place roll in well-buttered pan and dot generously with butter. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.).

Heat peas in own liquid, add one tablespoon butter, seasoning to taste, and put through sieve. Pour this sauce over baked crabmeat roll which has been removed to a hot platter. Serve at once. Serves six.

'Mixed Grill' in the Marry-Go-Round

LOTS OF MODERN men seem to think that love should be one long fairway, but that marriage is just a "sand-trap."

Why marry? Oh, well, you can always find somebody to share your money and your pleasures with you—but you've got to have somebody TIED to you to share your burdens and troubles and secrets and sorrows. That's ONE reason why.

He's Too Ready to Believe Gossip

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a boy for the past few weeks and have learned to love him very dearly. At the time I met this boy I was engaged to another, but broke it, realizing that this was the real thing. I gave up everything and every one for him, and now he has left me, due to the fact that his family dislike me. They heard some gossip about me that is not true. They have succeeded in breaking us up. He left without a word and I have not seen him since. I am just sick over the whole affair. I haven't eaten or slept in over a week. Shall I call him on the phone, try to get in touch with him, or what? My friends say he is weak, yellow and tied to his mother's apron strings, but I feel sure this is not true. BUNNY.

Dear Bunny: Every one is entitled to trial, and the fact that this young man apparently has condemned you, without giving you a chance to explain the gossip, doesn't put him in a very favorable light. Think ahead. How would you get along with a husband of this type? If you still care, after the attitude he has taken you might give him a ring or write him a note and attempt to set him right. Perhaps after you see him again you will see him differently and realize that he is not worth missing meals and sleep over. If they're the type who listen to gossip and rumors, when they're unfounded, they really aren't worth worrying about.

Wants Her to Buy a Car

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 27 years old, working for my living and only three years in this country. I have a boy friend who is the same age. I love him, but he never has told me that he loves me. Now he wants to buy a new car with my savings. He wants it for taking me out, as he doesn't like to walk and he has no money to get one. He seems to need all his money for himself. He told me if I would not buy the car by a certain day, he would never see me again; and I know what he said he will do. MARY.

Dear Mary: I think, my dear Mary, even if you do care for this young man, you must realize his selfishness, and how unwise it would be for you to put your money into such an investment. Very probably you would soon discover that you had lost not only your savings and the car, but the young man as well.

MONSTERS OF DEEP PROVIDE THRILL AT SEA
By GILBERT SELDES

I LOOKED OUT of my porthole, which is a window, and saw dirty weather, but at the horizon line, under gray clouds, was a white shape which, for a moment, I took to be an iceberg. I tried to keep my eye fixed upon it, but it seemed to dissolve into the mist; it came back, then vanished entirely, and I was sorry, because actually to see an iceberg is a rare experience. Presently I heard the Swedish stewards knocking politely at cabin doors and advising the passengers to go on deck and see the icebergs. By the time I went up the one I had seen had disappeared, but on the other side a magnificent berg rose dazzling in the sunlight. For some reason they had drifted far south this year and, apparently aware of their presence, we had taken a course which took us clear of them but gave us the full benefit of the view.

GILBERT SELDES

Phenomenon

They seemed natural enough, yet the passengers gazed on them with fascination; the Empire State Buliding or Pike's Peak floating on the waters could not have more completely engrossed them. So long as the monster was in sight we followed it, too safe for fear, but vaguely moved. Even the officers of the ship paid tribute, for an iceberg appears only once in many years, and we had two. For once I regretted the range and universality of the scenic movies; I would rather have had no idea in the world of what an iceberg looked like; yet the event was hardly spoiled. The mass of ice sailed on its way as if we were the interlopers on a sea over which it, and not ourselves, had mastery. It was frightening, not for what it might do to us—it could do nothing—but because it was one of the unforeseen tricks left in Nature's bag. It was as awe-inspiring as thunder or an eclipse must have been to the savage.

Whales, Too

Children get accustomed to the ocean after a few hours; adults, if they are not sick of it, are bored after a day or two. They turn to the ship, to books or bars or companions, but the sea itself is so much under control that it neither frightens nor interests us. Nowadays there is always the prospect of picking up a stray aviator, but we had no luck that way. The iceberg was our event, and it was magnificent.

Whales were reported in the distance, but a distant whale is nothing to me, for once, years ago, I was standing at the rail and suddenly a monstrous brown form lifted itself not 10 feet away, and rose so high that in the first instant I shrank back, and in that moment missed its head; I saw only the huge, glistening back and a moment later the fluke as the whale submerged again. After that glimpse I thoroughly believed the story of Jonah; I understood the ancient respect and wonder that leviathan had inspired. Like the iceberg, the whale was a profound, self-sustained mystery, owning the waters upon which we had intruded.

Apology to Mr. Coolidge

The Kungsholm, which is cozy and charming, has the usual gymnasium and in it the usual electric horse. The result is unusual. I feel like making an apology to Mr. Calvin Coolidge. I remember the cackle of laughter which rose when the report got round that our President was exercising on one of these beasts. It still seems silly to ride a mechanical horse when you can ride a live one; but my guess is that nine out of 10 who mocked Mr. Coolidge being jounced on his contraption had never tried it themselves. Actually, it is a comic and pleasant experience, and for the first few minutes, if you put the thing to a full speed trot, as perilous an adventure as you could want.

The Chief Executive, I suspect, used the horse a little grimly, in place of the Biblical reason and injunction to take a little wine. Yet there is always the mad possibility that he enjoyed the comic motion, the absurdity of sitting face to face with a wall and being joggled up and down and sidewise. If anyone should raise the old cry that this is just another substitution of the machine for the living being, I would suggest that in this case the horse might do the worrying not ourselves.

Mr. Joseph Brewer, who publishes books, recently wrote in this place a word of advice on what books to read at sea. I published his letter, but did not take his advice. The result is that running out of detective stories I read (or read again) four famous books, two of them quite new, two of them old. All have been highly praised and the old ones deserve their fame: "The Memoirs of Saint Simon" and "Bennett's Old Wives' Tale." The new ones, which I failed to read when they were being all-hailed by critics and selling in the thousands, struck me as pretty fair books: "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "The Education of a Princess." In neither case did I discover the first trace of that supreme quality which I should have been happy to find. The reviewers had been stampeded again and quite ordinary books had again been ballyhooed into masterpieces.

Music for the Masses
The Esplanade Concerts

They are played in the cool of the summer evening, when the people seek respite from the heat and troubles of the day.

Boston should be glad to maintain this institution, which is not exceeded in the United States and which rivals the open-air concerts of Berlin and Heidelburg.

Unlike Germany, our government provides no subsidy for this event, which affords so much enjoyment for so many of our people. No fee is charged here. The Esplanade concerts must rely upon the generous contributions of the public who derive the pleasure from them.

Mr. Fiedler informs us that the plans have been completed to resume the concerts on July 7. But the funds are missing. The sum of $12,000 is needed. Small as well as large contributions are desired. If the audience of 20,000 people sent but $1 apiece, the requirements would be met.

The contributions should be sent to the Arthur Fiedler Concert Fund, Merchants National Bank, 28 State street. By all means donate. Every reader of these lines will realize that there is a special requirement for entertainment for the public in times like these.

Away for the Summer

Who get the most good from vacations? Children, no doubt. Their Stone Age instincts flourish unrepressed on the beach, on grass or amid trees. As for adults, perhaps it is professional folk who enjoy them most.

A truth that not many will admit is that most people do like their work, and are not keen on dropping their work for a month. They may think they would, but what they do look forward to is the sense of physical well-being which comes from living in the open air and from building up and satisfying a country appetite.

The artist, the poet, the acrobat, the philosopher—their tasks are easily portable. They can practice them anywhere. The business man has to leave his shop or office behind him. Then there are millions who are never happy anywhere except in cities.

Their tastes may be peculiar, but it can't be helped. Charles Lamb, thanking Wordsworth for a visit with him in the country, wrote that the trees were all very well, but seeing again vast crowds in the Strand, he "shed tears from fullness of joy at so much warm life."

Dr. Cushing Should Stay

When Dr. Harvey Cushing reached the terrible old age of 63 years last April, announcement was made that he must retire as surgeon-in-chief of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital this fall because of the age limit.

The Boston Evening American then said and now repeats that this silly requirement should be abandoned in favor of this eminent brain surgeon and specialist.

Our conviction in this matter is enlivened by the fact that Senora Calles, wife of the ex-President of Mexico, has been brought here all the way from Mexico City in order that Dr. Cushing may perform upon her a delicate brain operation which, the surgical specialists of America agree, he is best qualified to perform.

Harvey Cushing is at the pinnacle of his career. He is still a young man and will be a young man for many years to come, we hope and expect. The world, along with Senor Calles, recognizes his extraordinary ability and we of Boston should insist that he be retained in the position where his talents will be of the widest value.

Grownups and Pupils

Miss Mary McSkimmon of Brookline looks back upon her fifty years of teaching in the public schools and allows that the children of today have it all over the old-time pupils in about every way imaginable.

They take on responsibility better, she says, are self-reliant and interested in the truth. They are more thorough students, just as amiable and more difficult to deceive.

"The trouble, if there is any," says Miss McSkimmon, "is with the grownups, who have too many outside interests which distract their attention from their own children."

She ought to know. No doubt she does. Miss McSkimmon is speaking of the grammar school children, of course, before they reach the high school age when they are more amenable to the temptations produced by prohibition and the frivolities of what we know as modern civilization. Anyway, vacation time is here and the children, God bless them, are never more delightful in their good behavior. Except just before Christmas.

Slick, Not Subtle

France makes a distinction when stating her position in regard to the debts to America:

"We will not repudiate. Neither will we pay."

That may be a distinction in French, but what is the difference in plain American?

Repudiation may be an ugly word, but it is no uglier than the reality, and realities just won't be concealed by changing their names.

New York Day by Day

Then and Now

NEW YORK, June 25—One thing about the adjustment—depression to the crepe hangers—is the elegant break we get in service. I remember when you had to be just like that with James J. Hill, or E. H. Harriman to land a reservation on a fast train. And unless you were one of the Goulds, conductors snooted at you.

Pardon my hiccups, but telephone for a railroad ticket for no farther than Poughkeepsie today and the chairman of the board in silk hat will arrive with it in person within the hour. And about getting a cafe table. Head waiters always made me feel like one of those anxious little boys in large spectacles with mama.

When I hove into sight, they'd dust off a chair behind a palm smack-up against the bass drum. My pals! You'd think I was in full scratch with a new setting of itch. But, as of even date, I can get the same attention as Russ Colombo squiring Garbo in any eatery in town.

And, O, my only Aunt! what a change in the theatrical box office men. The pawn-broker's eye they used to give Mr. M. My voice always trailed off into a slate pencil screech asking for two on the aisle. I never got better than Z, where I'd converse around the post with my wife.

The other evening I dropped around to the box office of a hit show and with my usual post-office chattiness inquired: "What have you"—here the usual upshoot into tenor—"in the way of two good seats?" As quick as a wink he snatched a pair from the rack in B, on what Cousin Elvira called the "izzle."

I think I could have stood in the wing and taken the star out for supper but I don't galivant around with show women—not since the crash. This piece is going goofy. Still everybody is establishing new lows—so here goes one in columning.

At the tailor's just before we rode into the big wave, you couldn't have a suit made in less than three weeks. And even that was a vague promise. If the coat split up the back when you sat down they'd make you feel unreasonable by arguing how tight the buttons were sewed on. (Memo to biographer—in the blackest hours of the depression he was always clowning and getting off things.)

* * *

As for getting credit these days, just leave your name. The address isn't necessary. Yet ten years ago when I tried to open an account at a department store, they even peeked under my eyelids, took samples of my dandruff and tested my knee jerks.

* * *

I have an idea that if you stopped into Dunhill's, where the "clerks" wear linen dusters and spread the a from here to here, you could have Mr. Dunhill in person wait on you and perhaps you could call him Alf.

* * *

After years of facing the high and mighty crotchets trying to make a few purchases here an there I'm glad some of us old shopping buzzards can turn finger snappers.

* * *

So far as I can see there's only one hard-boiled mug who has not softened up in the world crucible. That's the New York banker. He still runs cold with ice water. God's Frozen People! But will thaw out. Everybody has to put on a thaw these days with Mrs. Whoozis doing the dishes in her Newport place. Just the other day one of those high-muckalorem door openers gave me a bow. It was just a hurried little nod, but it goes to show what is happening among us proletariats for the goodness sakes alive.

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

Are You Half Ghost?

OFTEN YOU FEEL you're missing something—find yourself, don't you, envying other people who seem to be getting a lot more out of life?

Elsie Robinson

Lucky creatures! You wonder how they do it. You wish you had their breaks. You, too, would like to live.

THEN WHY DON'T YOU?

Why do you pass up most of life?

Why do you insist on being half dead?

"But I don't; and I'm not!" you cry indignantly.

Oh, yes, you do; and you are!

Never a day but you deliberately throw away part of your life. Your body seems to be alive. You talk, you walk, you work; YET YOU ARE, FOR A GREAT PART OF THE TIME, ACTUALLY DEAD, AND FOR ALL YOU GET OUT OF LIFE, YOU MIGHT AS WELL BE ATTENDING YOUR OWN FUNERAL!

There's an interesting advertisement running in the current magazines. It shows the picture of a woman. One half of the woman wears the simple, snappy costume and hair cut of 1932. The other half is swathed in the crimps and pompadour, the puffed sleeves, pinched waist and ruffled bell skirt of 1902.

There she stands, pretty, healthy, seemingly wide awake, BUT ONLY HALF ALIVE. Her body exists in the world of today, but the really vital part of her—her thoughts, her emotions—inhabit the clothes of today, but her spirit wears the misty, gray memories of yesterday.

SHE IS HALF GHOST!

You wonder why you are losing so much of life? That is why.

BECAUSE YOU ARE REFUSING TO LIVE SO MUCH OF LIFE.

YOU, TOO, ARE HALF GHOST

It is so easy to refuse to live life; so easy to become a ghost!

Every time you run away from the job of today and wander in memory, YOU REFUSE TO LIVE.

Every time you evade reality and drift in day dreams, YOU CHOOSE TO DIE.

Every time you abandon yourself to sentimentality instead of facing facts; entrench yourself in a prejudice instead of going over-the-top after a new idea, or evade action by some convenient alibi—YOU ARE THROWING AWAY A CHANCE TO LIVE; YOU ARE PREFERRING DEATH.

And this is true, even when your evasions seem most noble. Grief seems noble. Heartbreak seems noble. Remorse seems noble. So does self-sacrifice.

Yet prolonged grief and remorse can blot out life as surely as a bullet and senseless heartbreak; and sacrifice can wreck life as surely as poison.

DON'T REFUSE LIFE!
DON'T REFUSE DEATH!
LIVE ALL OVER!
LIVE ALL THE TIME!
LIVE NO MATTER HOW HATEFUL IT IS!
CUT OUT EVERY COZY ESCAPE UNTO DEATH!
STOP ATTENDING YOUR OWN FUNERAL!
STOP BEING HALF GHOST!

Just Folks

After Toil

There isn't any happiness in happiness itself,
There isn't any knowledge in the books upon a shelf.
You may buy them by the dozens, but unless you read them through,
All the wisdom of their pages will be just dry rot to you.
For the only lasting lesson is the one you work to learn,
And the only worth-while pleasures are the ones you have to earn.

If never care disturbed us none would value peace-of-mind.
If it weren't for stern old duty we should never value play.
It takes three long months of labor to make sweet a holiday.
So be patient through your trials and be brave in times of doubt,
You will reap new fields of gladness when you've worked your problems out.

'Twas an Irishman I'm certain who this quaint assertion dropped:
"I'm glad my tooth is aching. 'Twill be grand when it is stopped."
There's philosophy for trials. It's the cold and driving rain
That sets us all rejoicing when the sun comes out again.
For if hearts were never troubled and if none a burden knew,

PLAIN SPEECH FROM GARNER
By Claude G. Bowers

THE MOST SIGNIFICANT and important political development of the pre-convention week is the statement of Speaker John N. Garner setting forth, in downright manner, his views on outstanding problems before the people. He has acted wisely in remaining aloof from controversial matters until the work of the House is over. As the leader of his party there, and as the presiding officer, he merely respected tradition in remaining silent.

Now the session is about over and he has spoken. While true, as he says, that his thirty years in Congress have revealed his general views on government, and true that he has voted on at least some phase of every pending problem, his candidacy for the Presidency, pressed upon him, makes his present action one of courage.

The Reasons for the Depression

But his candidacy aside, the views of the second most important officer of the nation are of importance. With these views we find ourself in hearty accord. He puts his finger on one of the reasons for the depression when he says:

"This country has erected tariff barriers that are practically excluding the products of foreign nations. This makes it economically impossible for these nations to buy from us the products of our farms and our factories, thereby aggravating our industrial depression."

No economist will challenge the conclusion. No importer or exporter who does not know it. There are at this hour at least two million people out of work in America because of the loss of our foreign trade.

That manufacturers know it is evident in the fact that the greatest among them, in search of the lost markets, are now building branch factories in other countries with American money; these branch factories employ, not American, but foreign labor; this foreign labor is paid with American money which foreign labor spends with foreign merchants.

The House tariff act, for which it had a clear mandate from the people, provided for the opening of negotiations with other nations for reciprocal concessions making for the restoration of foreign trade; and Hoover vetoed it.

Garner Hits Straight

Like some of the other candidates, Garner takes his stand foursquare for a public works program to put the jobless back into the purchasing class for the benefit, not only of their wives and children, but of the merchants and manufacturers and farmers. He hits straight when he says:

"Enough work must be provided to keep the people from starving, and we shall be fortunate indeed if this irreducible cost minimum does not greatly exceed the amount provided in the relief measures which I sponsored."

Public work must be provided—or we shall face some very unpleasant music next Winter. And the Garner bill, which is more advanced than any other pending, will not, we are sure, fully meet the requirements of the crisis. The time may come, with conditions not improving, when the most conservative will be driven to the conclusion that a five-billion-dollar prosperity loan would have been the most effective preventive of extreme measures.

But Garner recognizes the principle; and the nation's obligation—which is something Mr. Hoover, hovering over the ticker tape and seeing conspiracies in the fact that there is no bull movement in the market on stocks no longer paying a dividend, cannot see.

That is one of the reasons the public is forced to the conclusion that Mr. Hoover is unfit to grapple with the crisis.

Garner's Stand on "Cancellation" of Debts

Courageous, too, because it flies in the face of powerful financial interests, is Garner's stand on the "cancellation" or transfer of the foreign debts. It is worth recording that on the day James M. Beck was reminding the English people that the repudiation of debts means loss of confidence in the repudiators Mr. Garner should be saying:

"An individual who borrows money and makes no honest effort to repay is dishonest; and the same applies to a nation.

"If foreign debts should be cancelled the credit of the nations involved would be destroyed and they cannot borrow again."

This is such a trite comment that we are increasingly appalled by the insistence of persistent propagandists of the international banking group that it is dishonest and detestable that we should even ask our debtors to attempt to pay.

Honest to the American People

More honest to the American people, by far, is the statement of Garner:

"The Government of the United States owes it to its citizens to collect from the debtor nations to the extent of their ability to pay and there should be no flim-flam accepted as to that ability to pay."

There is not a nation that owes us that is not able to pay by slightly reducing its budget estimates for war purposes. If they are not willing to make those reductions, there is no reason why we should take upon our shoulders the debt-burdens of the world.

What an affront to common sense and justice that this should be asked of us when we have the greatest deficit to meet of any nation; when our taxes have been piled on until the back of business is breaking; when we have ten million unemployed.

The Most Impressive Feature

To many the most impressive feature of the Garner statement is his unequivocal position on prohibition. The brevity of it illustrates how few words are necessary when confusion and concealment is not the plan.

Thus:

"When the prohibition amendment was proposed, I, as a member of Congress, voted against it. I have never believed it sound or workable and it should be repealed."

So that is that: "short horse soon curried."

A United Democracy Cannot Be Defeated

The day before the opening of the Republican Convention the hotels in Chicago, including the Congress, where all things centered, were lonesome, dull, heavy, with the politicians preferring to discuss anything but politics.

A week before the opening of the Democratic Convention, Chicago is seething with excitement. It is evident, even from this distance, that there is plenty of drama even now. There will be clashes, and they will not be fake ones; clashes of personal ambition, some minor clashes on the platform. But this is nothing new to Democratic conventions, and especially in the winning years.

In a hundred years of Democratic conventions we can recall but two where the clashes in the conventions were destructive of the party's prospects at the polls—that of 1860 at Charleston, and that at New York in 1924. With the clear prospects of victory ahead it is not likely that leaders' quarrels will greatly affect the attitude of the great rank and file.

And there are millions of men who feel the sins of omission and commission by the Hoover Administration have wrought their ruin that will vote a protest regardless of what politicians may do or say.

Even so, the plain Democrat with no personal ambition or axe to grind and the party interest at heart will observe the fighting from afar with some anxiety. A united Democracy cannot be defeated at the polls; the convention can make impossible a united Democracy. There is the drama.
